Brass-knuckle time for Tories

By MARY JANIGAN
FP News Service

OTTAWA — The real campaign fireworks explode tomorrow night.

On television screens across the nation, caricatures of former Liberal cabinet ministers will flash, one after another, in a haunting litany: John Turner, Donald Macdonald, Iona Campagnolo, Barney Danson, Otto Lang, Speaker James Jerome — all "not running again". Then along comes the punch line: "If you vote Liberal, you get Pierre Trudeau — and nothing else."

The skirmishes are over in campaign 1980. It's brass-knuckle time. And the underdog Tories, battered by the polls, are nonetheless buttressed by the notion that these potent ads, their cabinet team and Prime Minister Joe Clark's new campaign tactics can stem the apparent voter swing toward the once-banished Liberals.

In any other Canadian campaign, that Tory optimism could be viewed as proverbial straw-grasping. They're trailing badly in the polls and have a scant four and a half weeks to reverse the trend. Their leader is widely viewed as incompetent and as the central campaign issue. Their move toward high energy prices has clearly irked an inflation-obsessed electorate. And their message of temporary tough times on the road to recovery is not grabbing headlines on the national news.

But the voters are clearly volatile this time out. They're unhappy with just about every choice. And the Tories have a notion that if they can turn the spotlight back on reclusive Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau and promote the image of "Clark and His Team," while waging a relentless local campaign, they can lure the wayward switchers back to the fold.

Most of their hope rests on the national ad campaign. Five ads — stage one of the four-week package — will begin tomorrow night and will feature a full-scale attack on Trudeau, with a bleak portrait of his broken promises, the effects of his reign, his arrogance and his lack of a team. Tory strategists say that these ads will run until the prospect of Trudeau as prime minister appears to penetrate voter awareness as an issue.

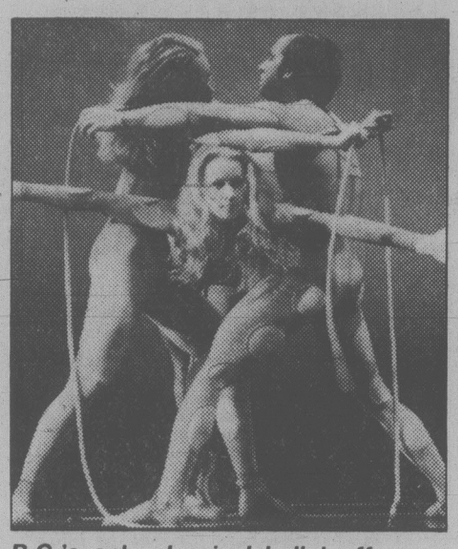

"We've got to get the focus back on Trudeau — turn him into an issue again and remind the voters why they threw the Liberals out last May," Tory party national director Paul Curley said in an interview.

The Conservatives say their polls indicate that Canadians are open to appeals that the Clark government never received a "fair chance" and to the idea of change. Naturally, that means that Clark will be arguing that 47 days of Parliament was scant time to reverse Liberal trends and that the defeated budget was barely the beginning of a move towards energy self-sufficiency and financial restraint.

The pollsters are warning the Tories, however, that this grim message will scarcely grab headlines when Afghanistan is erupting and other parties are dangling catchy new programs.

Toll-free cheer to buoy Tories

By NORMAN GIDNEY

It's called the PC Newsline.

The toll-free telephone number in Ontario provides a daily pep talk to Conservative candidates and party workers across Canada.

It's supposed to be (whisper it) confidential but the Times obtained the 13-digit code (112-800-267-4081) and has been listening in this week.

A professional announcer reads the recorded announcement, which changes daily.

It's partisan stuff, of course, but to the uncommitted eavesdropper some of it's also pretty funny.

Joe Clark is fighting back in the leaders' popularity contest, the voice said on Friday.

He's coming across as hard-hitting and decisive while Pierre Trudeau has been giving "dull and uninspiring" performances.

What's the voters' verdict?

"Bo-ring," says the announcer.

"Voters are beginning to notice the man who isn't there," he says.

"They see an aggressive, tough, decisive Joe Clark against an opponent who just doesn't have it any more."

The Liberals say the Conservatives are obsessed with reducing the budget deficit.

"We have to be," he says, "because Canadians now are paying $1,000 each just for the interest on his deficit.

"Ask your Liberal opponent: does he want to drive Canada further into debt?"

On Wednesday the voice noted "Joe Clark had an exciting day yesterday." He made an extensive campaign swing through Ontario.

Trudeau, on the other hand, "emerged from hiding for a brief 45 minutes to give away more government money that he doesn't have."

BALLET, MIME AND HUMOR are the magic ingredients used by Kaleidoscope Theatre to convey to schoolchildren the character of color and sounds issuing from the Victoria Symphony's 36-member core. The Symphony Show was at Margaret Jenkins School Friday, when kindergarten to Grade III children from other schools were bussed in, and soon about 3,000 youngsters from 12 schools will see the interpretations of a wide range of music from Sousa to Beethoven as well as Debussy, and Gershwin.

Eckardt probe launched

VANCOUVER (CP) — Allegations of possible political interference with the 1978 British Columbia electoral reform commission will be the subject of a ministerial investigation, Attorney-General Allan Williams said.

The announcement of the investigation by Dick Vogel, deputy attorney-general, came after Williams received a sworn affidavit from commission stenographer Florence Tamoto who alleged a commission staff member told her of possible political interference.

Tamoto, who earlier was fired by the commission, gave her statement to the Vancouver Sun which passed it on to Williams and Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe without publishing it.

Williams said the affidavit raises serious questions about recent statements by Wolfe, commission chairman Larry Eckardt and Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy.

All have denied a British Columbia Television story which said boundaries of the Vancouver-Little Mountain riding were mysteriously changed.

TORONTO (CP) — A Gallup poll shows that more Quebec residents than any other group of Canadians are unfamiliar with, have never read or have no reaction to the Quebec government's proposal for a referendum on sovereignty-association with the rest of Canada.

The poll, released today, showed that 27 per cent of Quebecers questioned, compared with 12 per cent of the national sample, say they were unfamiliar with the proposal released in November. Outside Quebec, seven per cent of respondents said they were not familiar with the Parti Quebecois white paper.

However, 67 per cent of those Quebecers who did recall the proposal remembered its details, compared with 31 per cent in the rest of Canada.

Negative reaction to the proposal was 19 per cent in Quebec and 20 per cent outside the province.

Results were based on 1,012 personal, in-home interviews.

Behind the scenes

B.C.'s bearpit politics will be examined by Times legislative reporter Jake Banky in The House — a new Times column appearing Saturdays on the local page.

Banky will offer a behind the scenes view of personalities and politicians making government go round.

He'll deal with the issues, offer interpretations of government actions and decisions and tell you what makes our B.C. politicians tick.

BCR back on tracks

By JAKE BANKY

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich Friday engineered a return to work on the B.C. Railway.

After 50 hours of around-the-clock negotiations at the legislature, Heinrich presented management and the council of rail unions with his personal formula for settlement.

Chief union negotiator Norm Farley said the settlement proposal will be put before the membership.

The council will make no recommendation but the individual union leaders may recommend for or against acceptance.

Railway spokesman Gabriel Somjen said the package will be put before the BCR board of directors and a response can be expected in a couple of days.

Farley said it will take three weeks to a month for the widely-scattered trainmen to vote.

In the meantime, the trains start rolling again. Picket lines came down at 4 p.m. Friday and Farley said service would return to normal as quickly as possible.

In his settlement formula, Heinrich proposes a 22-per-cent wage increase spread over 30 months.

Management started with an offer of 14 per cent over 29 months while the unions sought 35 per cent over 20 months.

Heinrich would shelve the controversial manning issue until the fall. He recommends appointment of a fact finder to examine the company's proposal to reduce the size of train crews and report not later than Sept. 30.

Both union and management negotiators had praise for Heinrich for his efforts.

Farley spoke warmly of the minister's "long and tireless efforts, specially his defence of the free collective bargaining system."

One of the union men asked Heinrich, "Can we buy you a drink?"

New site for Games 'impossible'

By JOHN WARD

NEW YORK (CP) — Pulling the 1980 Summer Olympic Games out of Moscow seems to be impossible, both politically and physically, but a partial boycott seems likely.

The furore over the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan is growing in the United States and it looks as though this country, at least, may decide to forgo the Games.

The Carter administration holds the view that action against the Olympics would be a sharp blow to Soviet pride. It is felt that the Russians have planned the Games as a prominent showcase for their system and way of life and that cancellation or a major boycott would be crushing.

Reference is made repeatedly to the 1936 Berlin Olympics, used by Adolf Hitler to promote Nazism. Of course, Jesse Owens, the great American sprinter, cramped the Nazi style a little by winning four gold medals in Berlin.

Changing the venue of the Moscow Games, as proposed by Canadian Prime Minister Clark and others, is easier said than done.

Physically, there are sports facilities in several cities, including Montreal, site of the 1976 Olympics, and Munich, where the 1972 Games were staged.

However, the Olympics require more than a stadium and a swimming pool. Proponents of the site-switching option have yet to come up with a solution for housing the thousands of athletes, officials and journalists who attend the Games.

Besides, U.S. Olympic Committee officials have said any decision to boycott the summer Olympics in Moscow would have to come from the American athletes themselves, regardless of what President Carter recommends.

"Our responsibility is to the American athletes," Committee spokesmen said in a prepared statement. "If our government advocates a boycott, our athletes, under Olympic rules, must decide whether or not they wish to comply."

With only six months left before the scheduled start of the Games, it seems much too late to start a construction project, particularly in light of the fact that Montreal worked for six years to get ready for the '76 Games and barely got everything finished by the opening ceremony.

Politically, a change of venue would be disastrous. The International Olympic Committee is committed to the Moscow Games and switching sites would mean breaking its contract with the city, for one thing.

In such a event, the Soviet Union would likely stage a set of mini-Games anyway.

It's brass-knuckle time for the Tories

So, unlike the last campaign when Clark centred his events and his announcements on the national electronic media, the leader will now be confronting his large crowds at night and working local hot-line and public affairs programs during the day. The local media — usually brushed off with a friendly handshake — will be smothered with attention.

"The Liberals have nowhere to go but down," Curley insists," The Liberal Party — not Trudeau — has been riding a high and that high continued right through the first week of January because no one was focusing on the election.

"Now people are taking a good look. And they see Trudeau with no platform and no team and they see Clark taking his case to the people — and he's reaching a lot of people these days."

The Conservatives hope that Clark's sessions with the voters will dispel the widespread charge that he is incompetent. They feel that if voters actually see him and hear him fielding questions and taking strong stands, they will be reassured.

At the same time, the Tory cabinet team is fanning out across the country. External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald, House Leader Walter Baker, Finance Minister John Crosbie, Agriculture Minister John Wise, Fitness Minister Steve Paproski, Transport Minister Don Mazankowski and International Trade Minister Michael Wilson have been let loose on the unsuspecting nation. Superstar Crosbie will actually devote the next three weeks to touring every major city in crucial Ontario.

Conservative strategists say their polls pinpoint Trudeau's lack of a strong team as his major campaign weakness. And Tory ministers are flying across the nation to drive that point home. They are also on the road to explain the energy issue and, in particular, the proposed 18-cents-a-gallon gasoline excise tax — which has become the Conservatives' albatross.

The Tories say their polls show that the major voter worry is inflation and that when questioned, these voters specify their concern about high energy prices. They do not make the link between high prices and assured supplies.

Curley says that both the ministers and Clark are going to be selling this link, arguing that Canada cannot depend on the graciousness of Venezuela, Mexico and other OPEC nations. He says that Clark will argue that increased revenue from higher prices will be plunged into energy-related projects — not into general revenue.

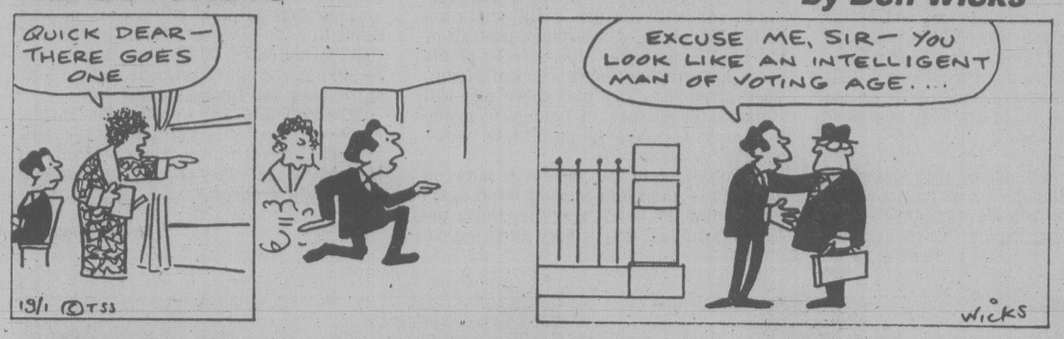

And he says that Clark will begin to ridicule a Trudeau pledge that oil prices will not climb to drastic heights with the argument that this means an incresed deficit.

"We've got to focus that message — that link between prices and supply — where it will be listened to — on the local media — and Clark is really getting out into the areas," says Curley.

"Things are starting to come our way."

THE OUTCASTS

Games furore grows

declare them the official Olympics and start a statistical battle that would leave the record books riddled with asterisks and probably spell the end of the modern Olympics.

Cancellation, which has also been suggested, would probably produce the same result.

It has been suggested that the Games be staged at a number of different locations. That idea, though, would reduce the competitions to ordinary world championships and defeat the entire purpose of the Olympics, which is to bring athletes together from around the world.

A boycott of the Olympics for political reasons is nothing new. In 1956, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Spain all withdrew from the Melbourne Games in protest over the Russian invasion of Hungary.

The 1976 Games were marred by the refusal of 28 African countries to participate. They were protesting sports links between New Zealand and white minority-ruled South Africa.

Perhaps the present situation will produce a rethinking of the entire Olympic concept, leading to smaller Games at a permanent site without the flags, anthems and other nationalist trappings that make politics inevitable under the present circumstances.

Newsline buoys Tories

The Liberal leader announced goodies for old age pensioners "in a chic women's club."

That's a reference to Trudeau's speech on Tuesday at the exclusive 21 McGill club in Toronto pledging higher guaranteed income supplements for the elderly.

On the proposed television debate between the party leaders, "he's still chickening out."

On Thursday, the announcer told fellow Tories: "We finally agree with Trudeau." That was on the former prime minister's references to trying to reduce Ottawa's deficit.

But when he was in office, noted the man from Tory HQ, "Trudeau added to the bloated federal budget by $5.1 million a day.

"Hit your Liberal opponent with this epitome of the Liberal record."

Just to buck up those who were sneering at Ontario Premier Bill Davis' decision to holiday in Florida while Joe slugs it out alone in Ontario, the announcer said perkily that Davis has mailed letters to 3,500 staunch party supporters in the province telling them Clark's their man.

But all is not rosy in the Conservative camp.

Even the anonymous cheerleader on the PC Newsline warns party insiders not to despair if the next round of public opinion polls show Clark and the Conservatives still well back of the Liberals.

He seemed to have forewarning of the weekend Gallup poll results which apparently show the Tories still lagging.

"Don't get down if the Gallup poll shows the same figures as last December. It was taken in early January before the public started paying attention to the campaign," he says.

And presumably before they started noticing the new Joe Clark.

Anyway, "public opinion is turning our way" — at least the kind that George Gallup can't measure.

"Our campaign is developing momentum, particularly in Toronto."

Quoting from the Toronto Star, which has already endorsed the Grits, the voice switches to heavy sarcasm in reproducing the words of a supposed Liberal insider who worries that some "shakiness" has developed in the party's strength.

"Take heart, we're gaining fast. And have a Tory day."

2 divers search for bodies

Two RCMP divers were searching Sooke basin today for the bodies of Louis Planes, 52, and his wife Barbara, 50, who are presumed drowned following a boating mishap early Friday morning.

The search is being concentrated about 300 feet from shore opposite 5269 Sooke Road where the couple's boat was found submerged in about 20 feet of water.

The two were returning with three other members of their family from a clam dig when their 15-foot runabout capsized at about 12:30 a.m.

Their son, Robert Steven, 29, daughter, Charlene Alice, 15, and Robert's son, Blake, 12, made it safely to shore.

Police said the elder Planes was wearing hip-waders and his wife was a non-swimmer.

The spokesman said no effort will be made to raise the boat until the search for the couple is completed.

the weather

Skies will remain mainly sunny with a high pressure area dominating the province for the next few days. Temperatures will remain on the cold side. However the upper flow has deflected somewhat allowing Pacific disturbances to just graze the north coast. As a result the north coast will remain cloudy with intermittent precipitation.

Crippled tanker repaired

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — With power restored after a night adrift on stormy Prince William Sound, a tanker laden with 831,000 barrels of Alaska crude oil headed for the safety of Valdez Harbor.

The tanker, named the Prince William Sound, lost its main propulsion and generator systems Thursday night as it headed toward the open Gulf of Alaska and Port Angeles, Wash., officials said.

For about 14 hours the 120,000-ton double-hulled ship wallowed in seas whipped up by winds to 150 kilometres an hour as two tugboats and the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Sweetbrier tried in vain to get a tow line aboard.

At mid-morning Friday, however, the ship's crew restored power.

Canada, U.S. agree: spill in Strait a disaster

Times News Services

Environment Minister John Fraser and United States environmental official Douglas Costle agreed Friday an oil spill off the West Coast resulting from increased oil tanker traffic would be nothing short of a mutual disaster.

Both officials told a news conference special care would have to be taken as the result of President Carter's approval Thursday of the Northern Tier Pipeline Co. proposal to move Alaskan oil by ship down the West Coast of Canada to Washington state and then by pipeline to the U.S. Midwest.

"If there is a major oil spill in that area, it's going to be a disaster," said Fraser.

"It's just absolutely clear that very great care will have to be taken," Costle added.

Costle, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and his senior staff were in Ottawa for a day-long meeting with federal and provincial environment officials to talk mainly about the acid rain problem.

Bob Sherman of the department's environmental protection service said in a telephone interview researchers have been conducting what are called spill models for the past two years to foresee environmental hazards for current tanker traffic along the coast.

The hook-up facility "would cut the risk of a spill east of Port Angeles where there would be the most biological risk (to Canada)."

Yet, an ill wind mixed with an oil spill could bring disaster to the west of Victoria and disrupt salmon fishing, destroy juvenile salmon rearing, possibly affect marine mammal life, shellfish and ruin the tourist industry, Sherman said.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Clark insisted Canadian proposals to move Alaskan oil to the United States Midwest are not dead.

Clark and his aides also fended off charges his government was not strong enough both in supporting its first-choice — an overland route — and in protesting the Northern Tier proposal that would increase oil tanker traffic along the B.C. coast.

The choice of the $1.23-billion Northern Tier proposal began shaping up as a major issue for the Feb. 18 election.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent said the U.S. decision is unacceptable for environmental reasons. He urged Clark to tell Carter just that.

And Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau accused Clark of secretly switching his allegiance from the overland Foothills Oil Pipe Line Ltd. route through Canada — also the first choice of Trudeau's former government — to a proposal by Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. of Vancouver.

Federal Finance Minister John Crosbie also said the Progressive Conservative government will continue efforts to persuade the United States to drop the Northern Tier oil pipeline.

Crosbie told reporters in Vancouver there is still time for President Carter's government to alter its plans for the movement of Alaskan oil southward.

$26,741 for injuries

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Kimberley man injured three years ago when a ski lift chair came free from its cable and fell 10 metres to the ground was awarded $26,741 in British Columbia Supreme Court Friday.

Justice W. J. Wallace ruled the Kimberley Ski Club Society was negligent in the Jan. 9, 1976, mishap in which Ronald Olson, now 26, was hurt.

The judge said the accident was caused when a clamp holding the chair to the cable came loose due a lack of proper adjustment on a set screw and that this was a foreseeable circumstance.

"It appears that no one even considered the matter and yet it must have been apparent to all the maintenance of the grip by this clamp was essential to the safety of the passengers," the judge said.

Olson suffered a compression fracture of three vertebrae, dislocation of the sternum, torn cartilage in the left knee and other injuries.

$6,689 claim against Tory

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pat Carney, Progressive Conservative candidate for Vancouver Centre in the Feb. 18 federal election, has been accused by two Vancouver companies of filing a false return under the Elections Act.

In a writ claiming damages of more than $6,000 against Carney and two campaign workers, Mirasol Farms Ltd. and Clan Donald Holdings Ltd. say Carney was aware of their claim against her, but filed a false return saying there were no unpaid, disputed claims arising from her campaign during the last federal election.

Also named in the county court suit, which asks $6,689.32, are lawyers W. W. Lyall Knott and Colin Pritchard.

The suit claims some of the contents of the new campaign headquarters were removed, including a bar worth $1,000, a $1,500 cocktail unit and an icemaker valued at $3,500.

Damages are also claimed for two broken windows.

Ex-chief charged

NELSON (CP) — William George Barr, former chief of police in Nelson, was charged Friday with 21 counts of fraud and false pretences involving more than $165,000.

Barr, who, before being appointed police chief in 1975 and was a police dog handler, was suspended early in December last year pending investigation of incidents "not connected with his work" by the RCMP commercial crime squad at Cranbrook.

Charges were laid by RCMP Corporal James Wesley Williams include three counts relating to each of seven incidents involving banks and credit unions. Details were not disclosed.

The indictment accuses Barr of defrauding the Bank of Montreal at Nelson of $55,000; the Royal Bank at Creston of $45,000 and the Toronto-Dominion Bank at Nelson of $15,000. Four other financial institutions are also included in the list of fraud charges.

R.S.P.'s

YORKSHIRE R.S.P.'s IN YOUR BEST INTEREST!

TAX RELIEF/RETIREMENT SAVINGS
YORKSHIRE TRUST has a better way

1. THE CASH PLAN

The Cash Plan is the simplest of all R.S.P.'s. Basically, it's a savings account with a guaranteed interest rate paid on the minimum monthly balance.

At Yorkshire Trust, the interest is compounded semi-annually, so you realize maximum interest on your investment.

Then Yorkshire Trust goes one better — we adjust your interest semi-annually to the rate of inflation, based on the average monthly change to the Consumer Price Index. Yorkshire Trust is the only company providing this unique feature.

Other features:
— No minimum amount to start your Cash Plan R.S.P., and no minimum amount for additions.
— No fees (unless the account is closed within the first 90 days).
— Funds may be transferred to either of the other types of R.S.P.'s.
— Transfers from other companies and retirement investment options will be handled at no charge.

2. THE G.I.C. PLAN

Yorkshire Trust's Guaranteed Investment Certificate Plan is just that — a guaranteed investment. Your contributions purchase Guaranteed Investment Certificates for a minimum one year term up to a maximum of five years. The choice is up to you.

There is a $500 minimum to open a G.I.C., however you may accumulate the $500 at a savings rate of interest and then purchase a G.I.C. when you reach the $500 amount.

Your money is invested at the rate in effect at the time you make the deposit, and is fully guaranteed for the term you have selected.

At Yorkshire Trust, we compound the interest semi-annually to maximize your return. This means that if you invest $1000 at a rate of 11%, your average annual return would yield 14.2% over a five year term — your $1000 would be worth more than $1,700!

Today our interest rate is 11½%, which means you are going to do even better than that if you invest now.

Other features:
— A guaranteed rate of return.
— Full security of capital.
— No annual administration fee.
— Transfers from other companies and retirement investment options will be handled at no charge.

3. THE SELF DIRECTED PLAN

Yorkshire Trust will, on written direction from you or your broker, invest the plan monies in any securities or investments (except mortgages), provided they qualify under the Income Tax Act. Covered option trading is also permitted.

The rate of return depends entirely upon your expertise, or that of your broker.

Income re-investment is your responsibility, however any uninvested cash in your account earns interest on the minimum monthly balance.

Yorkshire Trust will send you an annual statement, showing all deposits, investments and income, plus an official receipt for contributions. Monthly statements are also issued when transactions occur.

Other features:
— No minimum amount.
— Complete freedom of investment choice.
— A low fee structure (½ of 1% of the market value each year, with a minimum annual fee of $45, plus $20 for filing the annual income tax information return). The first five transactions are free, and then only $5 each after that.
— Covered option trading is permitted with the Yorkshire Trust plan.

In need of rescue

Even before a Vancouver inquest jury brings down its recommendations concerning the deaths of Taiwanese seamen from the ill-fated Lee Wang Zin, it may be realistic to assume the findings will have little impact on search and rescue on the west coast. After all, the federal government has been told often enough that search and rescue facilities are inadequate.

In the first two days of testimony, the Lee Wang Zin inquest jury was told of a series of delays in launching the rescue mission. When proceedings resume in February, military and coast guard officials will give their side of the story.

Whether or not fault is found in how rescue officials responded to the distress call, it remains true that Canada does not have the men, the ships or the aircraft either to give adequate search and rescue protection to mariners or to enforce marine and fisheries regulations.

All too often Canadian needs have been met by the Americans. Last fall, for instance, the first helicopter to take up the search for a Canadian fisherman lost overboard just north of the Queen Charlotte Islands was dispatched from Alaska. Weather apparently kept the Coast Guard helicopter in Prince Rupert on the ground — the same helicopter incidently, that was the first over the Lee Wang Zin.

In a marine mishap in which people have abandoned ship, aircraft offer the best chance for locating and picking up survivors. Exposure is the greatest risk to those overboard in B.C. coastal waters. The cold water brings on life-threatening hypothermia in a matter of minutes in the winter and an hour or two in the summer. But there isn't one helicpoter stationed north of Comox that has the capability of plucking people from the water.

Comox is about 450 miles south of the Alaska border. The north coast is about two hours away by fixed-wing Argus and Buffalo aircraft and about four hours by the large Labrador helicopters. Even if the general location of the marine mishap is known, the response time for these aircraft iis longer than a person can be expected to survive in those waters.

Ottawa's response to the plight of the north coast has been to commission a 64-foot cutter to be based at Prince Rupert. Although questions have been raised about its heavy sea capability, it will no doubt add a measure of security to pleasure boaters and fishermen plying and working the Inside Passage. In cases when response time is critical, however, it will be little more use than the helicopters stationed hundreds of miles to the south.

The amount of marine traffic in Georgia Strait and Strait of Juan de Fuca makes it logical that search and rescue services be weighted towards the south. But when there are hundreds of fish and pleasure boats in the north and deep sea traffic to the ports of Prince Rupert, Kitimat and Stewart is growing. At least one helicopter cabable of all weather search and rescue missions should be stationed in the north.

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon, whose ministry is reponsible for search and rescue, says he's not at all satisfied with the program on the west coast. As a result he's considering stationing helicopters in the Victoria area as well as Comox. That may help the south — which doubtless needs the aid too — but it will not solve the over-all problems on the B.C. coast.

The debt our children face

By JAMES CUTT

We taxpayers are tough taskmasters. We recognize that we are not about to enioy a rising standard of living on the basis of our own productivity (very few of us are interested in the idea of producing more in an hour's work, or working longer hours) so we look around for alternatives.

One way is to rely on taxpayers abroad who might be prepared to lend us part of their savings. But we have found that there is something of a Trojan Horse in this route, and we are much impressed by the prospect of "controlling our own destiny." So we look around our own shop, and turn to our hirelings in government.

Desires conflict

The task we often seem to set is severe: find a way to help us live beyond our means right now, or face defeat at the next election. While we insist on more and better goods and services such as hospitals, schools and roads, we generally also insist on the same or lower taxes.

One way out of this "bottom line" dilemma for government is to shift the burden of payment for such government goodies at least in part to future taxpayers, who don't have a vote at present, by borrowing from some of us now with a commitment that future taxpayers will pay us back at some time in the future.

But some of us do have to sacrifice a little right now in order to lend government the money, and we all have to sacrifice a bit in order to pay interest to the lenders. So it would be nice to find an easier solution. As in all aspects of life, there are no real magicians in government, but it is tempting to seek at least a bit of slight of hand.

One piece of slight of hand is for government to say: let's not borrow from taxpayers, but rather from the Bank of Canada. The trick here is that no present sacrifice is to be endured, and there is no commitment other than a nominal sort to interest or repayment.

The policy amounts, of course, to simply increasing the supply of money. The only snag with this solution is that is doesn't increase the supply of goods and services, only the amount of money. What happens? Well, prices rise; we have more money but we are no better, perhaps worse off. After a while, inflation and unemployment seem to start chasing each other!

There is a second form of slight of hand, favored by a third party in Canada, which amounts to increasing taxes without legislation. The trick is to abolish income tax indexation. As your money income rises, you march inexorably into higher tax brackets — so your tax bill increases. But since your real income — that is, what you can buy with your money — is not increasing, you are, in effect, paying higher taxes. Inflation is a tax bonanza for governments dishonest enough to abolish indexation of income tax payments.

How then would we taxpayers treat a government which, new to the game and perhaps naively optimistic about our disillusionment with slight of hand, pronounces that it has discovered that we cannot have what we are not prepared to pay for?

Easy to reject

Suppose the government insists that if we want more goodies we will have to give something up right now and perhaps pay a little or even a lot more for our fuel of the external and internal varieties. It would be tempting indeed for us simply to reject that government and insist that it is time for a new magician.

It would, however, also be worth reflecting on the interpretation which beleaguered politicians will place on such a rejection, on the likely further postponement of frankness and a sense of reality in our governments, and on the inevitably more traumatic adjustments which some government or other, down the road, must ultimately undertake.

Allan Fotheringham

40 years old, going on 70

OTTAWA — The reason Joe Clark has such problems with the voters is because of his old-fashioned concept of politics.

His view of how he should conduct himself before audiences is entirely at variance with the way most Canadians think about politicians in 1980, and so he is in trouble.

The perfect example of this came Friday morning at his regular press conference before the surprisingly mild questioning of nearly 100 reporters.

Along with the questions about President Carter's pipeline decision threatening B.C. oil spills and the Afghanistan situation, he was asked about the possibility of moving the Olympic Games from Moscow to Montreal.

Keeping in touch

Well, he said, his government had been in touch with the Canadian Ambassador in Ireland who had been in touch with Olympic boss Lord Killanin and we've had indications from West Germany that it wouldn't be possible to move the Games to Munich and so on.

"My view remains that it's preferable that the Olympic Games not be held in Moscow."

Well does that mean you want them held in Montreal?

The sonorous tones deepen, to emerge with the fact that "the highest possible consideration should be given to changing the venue?"

You mean Montreal?

There is the usual to-ing and fro-ing, all dreadfully serious, all treated with the same note of high concern as Afghanistan received and as was given to the threat of Jack Webster's Gulf Islands estate being inundated by three feet of Alaska prime crude.

But has Montreal itself been sounded out?

The prime minister allowed that he had made some soundings but "before I accept that" he wanted to make some new soundings among unspecified anonymous experts.

Now the problem is that in truth there isn't the faintest hope in Hades that the Olympics will be held in Montreal this summer.

Any crippled jock knows that, Canadian Olympic officials know that, the city of Montreal knows that, one presumes External Affairs knows that and Joe Clark, on his pillow, must know that.

The City of Montreal, which is essentially broke and still suffering the property-tax aftershock of its 1976 binge, hasn't either the wallet or the heart to amount a rescue operation.

The silly talk emanating from the prime minister's office blithely ignores the fact that the Montreal Expos, who narrowly missed winning a National League pennant last fall and feel their trades have ensured it for this year, have a legal contract for the Olympic Stadium this summer for their fabulously lucrative franchise and couldn't be budged by Russian storm-troopers, let alone Tories desperate for votes.

The point here is that the reason Joe Clark has [illegible] connection with the elbow-feel of most Canadians is that he does not appear to act naturally.

The voters of 1980, thanks to a John Kennedy (and a thousand clones), thanks to a Pierre Trudeau (who cloned himself on Dec. 13), are now accustomed to a more relaxed type of politician who does not treat every single issue under the sun as if Armageddon loomed behind the bush.

Joe Clark, because he came into politics so young — while his contemporaries were out developing confidence and competence in whatever field — entered this strange branch of life at a time when spurious pomposity and puffed-up artificiality were in vogue.

Peers laid-back

Most 40-year-olds today are products of a very laid-back, casual background. The 40-year-old that is Joe Clark has spent since high school in an incubator where the rattled wattles of a John Diefenbaker were supposed to indicate sincerity and the three-piece gloom of Mackenzie King was interpreted as perceived wisdom.

He is out of sync with his times, his manner coming from another era and so not fitting his youth.

He's sincere in this election, but in the wrong key. He hits the ear of the voter as operating in another, aged chord — and it jars.

Barbara McLintock

Probably too late

The story of the oil tankers did not begin this year. The decision by President Carter on Thursday to recommend the Northern Tier route as a method of bringing Alaskan crude oil to the U.S. did not come out of the blue. The fact that an oil superport was going to be built somewhere within 50 miles of Victoria has been, in effect, a fait accompli for years.

Yet the U.S. decision still somehow came as a shock to many Victoria residents. The spectre of a huge superport with its accompanying air pollution and the tremendous risk of disastrous oil spills suddenly looms up as something that will become a reality, probably only 20 miles across the Strait of Juan de Fuca at Port Angeles.

The shock effect of Carter's announcement is, in its ironic way, a tribute to the ability of people to ignore eventually even the most pervasive, on-going threats to their future well-being, to allow matters to drift, to switch their minds to other, more immediate threats.

Eight or nine years ago, the possibility of a monumental oil spill off the B.C. coast or along the Straits of Juan de Fuca or Georgia was on just about everyone's mind. The gigantic spill from the Torrey Canyon and the smaller, but still harmful one from the Arrow had made the public aware of the new threat that oil tankers could pose to coastal environments.

The politicians were concerned. In Ottawa, David Anderson, then the Liberal backbench MP from Esquimalt-Saanich, was leading the fight. He had the parliamentary environment committee undertake detailed studies of the B.C. coastline, the dangers that marine traffic found on it, and the environmental damage that would be done in the event of a spill.

In the B.C. legislature, the House passed unanimously a motion expressing its "deep misgivings over the ecological disaster which will engulf the coast of B.C. following the construction of a trans-Alaska pipeline and attendant supertanker transport of oil off the coast of B.C."

"We ask the federal government to use every available resource at their disposal to persuade the American government to use alternate methods of transporting crude oil from Alaska to the United States," the MLAs added.

Speaker after speaker rose in the debate to talk about the need for international co-operation between Canada and the U.S., between Washington state and B.C., to ensure that tanker traffic was kept to a minimum and that all possible safety precautions were taken.

In the 1972 federal election, the problems of tanker traffic was a major local issue in the two Victoria-area ridings. (It might be worth noting that at that time Allan McKinnon, making his first bid for federal office, suggested that an overland route, using both railway cars and pipelines, should be endorsed rather than a tanker route. Don Munro talked at length about the safety precautions that would reduce the risk of tanker traffic.)

Tiny oil spills were reported on, examined and studied at length as the portent of things to come. A 100-gallon spill from a ship emptying its bilges sent clean-up crews and oil-spill experts scurrying to the site.

And then, slowly, the issue faded away like the Cheshire Cat in Alice in Wonderland. No major spills happened along the B.C. coast to excite the population. Spills were reported regularly from other places throughout the world until they were described in the same tone as disastrous earthquakes, volcanoes and tidal waves — the inevitable three-day wonder.

No decisions were made. The questions about possible routes and possible sites for an oil port went round and round in circles from one government regulatory board to another and back again. The Strait of Juan de Fuca remained pristine. The summer air remained so clear that the Olympics looked as though you might reach out and touch them.

All in all, the threat of oil spills grew remote. It became like the threat of nuclear war, something that remains buried in the back of people's minds but almost never comes to the fore.

Yet all the time the regulatory bodies were undertaking economic impact studies, environmental studies, geological studies. Work was progressing steadily, bit by bureaucratic bit.

Until quite suddenly, all the work was done and President Carter announced his decision.

The Canadian people have re-awakened to the threat. Now, when it's probably too late to do anything about it.

Ellen Goodman

Inhuman hatchery?

It's been a year and a half since Baby Louise, the first child ever conceived in a dish, was born. Since then, at least two more babies have come into the world with the aid of this technique. One of them was born in Calcutta, where the streets teem with Sister Teresa's unwanted refuse.

Today these three sets of parents are, I am sure, more worried about their children's development than their origins. To them, at least, the procedure has seemed an unmitigated good.

Now, in Virginia, a private clinic has been okayed by the state. In about two months, if the opposition is unsuccessful, the clinic will begin fertilizing eggs, implanting embryos, creating new life in America.

And so the controversy is open again between the claims of the would-be parents and the qualms of society.

To some, this procedure is nothing more than a "bridge" to take the sperm and egg across a gap of broken fallopian tubes. To others, it is a social tunnel into the unknown.

To some, it is just a small medical step, another helping tool which we will soon accept the way we now accept the once-diabolical diaphragm. To others, it is a step down the long road to a Brave New World in which Aldous Huxley foresaw a human hatchery and fertilizing centre in the middle of London.

A fear of many protesting against the opening of this clinic is that doctors there will fertilize myriad eggs and discard the "extras" and the abnormal, as if they were no more meaningful than a dish of caviar. But this fear seems largely unwarranted.

The clinic procedure is likely to mirror that of nature. The clinic will in all probability harvest one egg at a time and fertilize one at a time, the way people do. In our lives, of every 1,000 fertilizations that occur, only 400 will develop to term. Of the 600 lost, 450 have a chromosomal abnormality. Of those born, only five to seven per thousand are abnormal. The statistics of the scientists in terms of discards and abnormality may be no more harsh than those of nature.

But whether this is acceptable or not depends on whether we consider each two-cell embryo a human being and how seriously we regard the desires of the would-be parents.

Our attitudes also depend on which we see as more humane: helping the infertile couple, or keeping the human body as the sole vessel of creation.

Leroy Walters, the director of the Center for Bioethics at the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown University and a member of the Health Education Welfare advisory committee that has put together an 860-page report on "in vitro" fertilization, sees it as an "entirely pro-life" activity.

"I take the desire of couples who wish to have children very seriously. Should they be legally prohibited from seeking help? My answer to that would be a very decisive 'no' unless it can be proved that it would mean serious damage to the society in general or to the offspring."

He sees neither of these, saying, "In the spectrum of risks that we as a human race face, the risks from some couples using in vitro fertilization are very low-level."

But two other members of the ethics committee, Leon Kass and Paul Ramsey, see it as "a giant step toward the full laboratory control of human reproduction."

As one committee member who did not want to be quoted by name put it, "What really concerns me is 'intervention,' our posture that we are in the world to master and control and manipulate. It seems to me that this is the posture of a community headed for a fall. I take this to be a very grave matter, far more grave than the providing of children to couples who want them."

Those who are for and those who are against in vitro fertilization agree with Dr. Walters' statement that, "I see it as another step in the control by human beings of reproduction." But they disagree about whether this is good or bad. Should we, they ask, respond like a consumer society to the demands of the buyer? If we don't stop here, where do we stop?

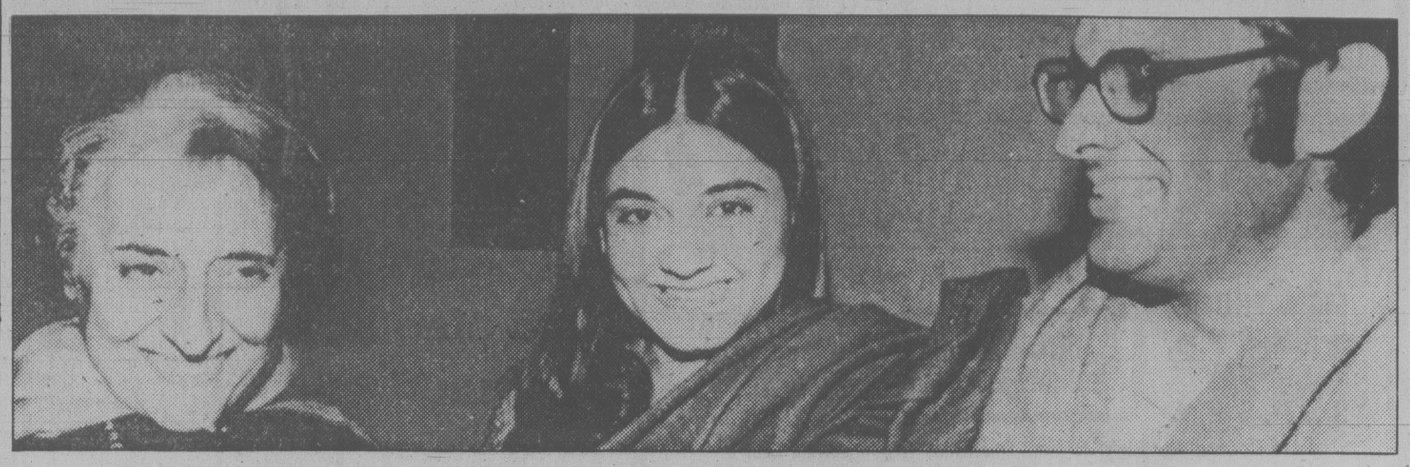

The questions are cosmic. But the issue in front of us at this moment is quite specific: one clinic.

As a person with qualms, it seems to me that fertilization and transplant is no more or less dehumanizing than artificial insemination, no greater or lesser a moral issue than the I.U.D., no more unsettling to some than it is hopeful to others.

I think we should neither fund such a clinic at this time, nor prohibit it. We should, rather, monitor it, debate it, control it. We have put researchers on notice that we no longer accept every breakthrough and every advance as an unqualified good.

Now we have to watch the development of this technology — willing to see it grow in the right direction and ready to say no.

Victorious Indira Gandhi, left, her son Sanjay, who also won election to parliament, and his wife Maneka

Anatomy of Indira's comeback

By SUNDANDA DATTA-RAY
The Observer

CALCUTTA — Indira Gandhi's brilliant grasp of timing and strategy is best demonstrated in adversity.

When told of the 1977 electoral debacle, she retired to a darkened room in a state of shock, fearful that she and her beloved son, Sanjay, would soon be behind bars or handed over to a vindicative mob.

But as the days and weeks wore on, with Desai's ministers greedily squabbling over the spoils of office and quite unable to decide what, if any, punishment should be meted out to her, Gandhi began to take stock. In consultation with only Sanjay and his cronies, she planned the long-term strategy for return to power.

She did not necessarily hanker for the office of prime minister, but the only way to overcome the intense official pressure on her was to appeal to the masses, who, apparently, adored Jawaharlal Nehru's imperiously handsome daughter. Only as the most powerful figure on the Indian political scene could she cock a snoot at the frightening legal apparatus that was being created to bring her to book.

Gandhi and Pierre Trudeau in New Delhi in January, 1971

She accompanied her purpose in three decisive stages.

Her first task was to cut down the size of the leaders of the official Congress Party, who were blaming her and Sanjay, and their arbitrary methods during the emergency, for the Congress rout at the hustings. Gandhi split the party in February, 1978, and most of its MPs rallied round her Indira Congress.

Her election to parliament from Chikmagalur in November, 1978, with a winning margin of more than 77,000 votes, formalized Gandhi's position as the most formidable opposition leader Morarji Desai had to contend with.

A ham-handed attempt by the government to jail her without sufficient evidence, the creation of special courts to cut corners and bring her and Sanjay to trial, and her summary [illegible] from parliament convinced people that Janata leaders were out not for justice, but for blood.

"Gandhi now wears a martyr's halo. There is no power in the country that can stop her," ecstatically declared a young Indira Congress legislator in West Bengal. Gandhi was a shade more confident: "No power on earth can stop me," she said.

India's persecuted heroine then embarked on the second stage of her comeback: the destruction of the Janata coalition.

Discreet inquiries established that the ambitious but disgruntled Charan Singh could be persuaded to revolt against Desai. Singh was Gandhi's implacable foe, but he was also desperately anxious to become prime minister.

The coup de grace was dealt in July, when Desai quit rather than face certain defeat on a no confidence motion.

The final stage of Gandhi's campaign came on August 20, 1979, when the new prime minister Charan Singh was called upon to prove his following and Indira Congress MPs refused to stand by him. She knew that Charan Singh's fall would inevitably mean fresh elections.

It was the moment she had been waiting for. By then Gandhi was convinced her party would capture at least 350 seats at the polls.

Gandhi is undoubtedly astute and competent, but, even more than her father, she is intolerant of leaders who might one day challenge her supremacy. Nor can she work in a team; she must always by obeyed.

Thus there are hardly any veteran Congressmen left in her ranks. Most of the MPs selected this time are young outsiders, buddies of Sanjay.

But, distant and arrogant as she can be, she has developed the knack of easy popularity with the crowd. Her hair is normally perfectly groomed, but when meeting the people she takes care to present a dishevelled salt and pepper head.

In Delhi she wears rich silks, but among her constituents her saris are always of the cheapest cotton. As she travels around India she contrives to address audiences with at least a few words of the local language.

These are the minor adjustments that enable people to love her for being so like them.

Mood of cynicism grows

PALTOO KA NANGLA — "You ask the news," said Deouji Ram. "The news is how much can we save of the crop. The election is only a minor matter."

The drought in this village has been worse than anyone can remember. There is not much grass in this part of grassroots India.

The canals are dry, the village has no electric power, and it cannot obtain the fuel needed to run its two tube-wells.

Paltoo Ka Nangla is only 32 miles from Agra and a mile or so from tarmac road, but it is a million miles from the values of urban India.

There were no election posters and there was not one election meeting.

And why should a candidate bother with Paltoo Ka Nangla? Its 150 mud homes are a mere dot on the map of Uttar Pradesh, India's largest state.

But if you stop and listen, the village says a lot about the state of the world's largest democracy. Eighty per cent of the population lives in 567,000 such villages.

When I visited this same village shortly after the emergency was declared in June, 1975, there was indifference at first.

But even obscure, unimportant Paltoo Ka Nangla was sucked in. Men were afraid to go to town in case they were grabbed and sterilized. Officials paid a rare visit "to tell us that our taxes were to be increased."

After swinging to the Janata Party in 1977, the villagers now regard all politicians as equally self-interested. "They all tell us they love us," says Puran, a small farmer said during the recent campaign, "yet what we need most now is fuel to get what water there is to the crops.

"But where is all the fuel? It is in the jeeps they use to spread their election promises."

"Yes," says Ram. "They come to snatch our votes like dogs."

This was my seventh visit to Paltoo in six years. My feeling as I left the village this time was that, if I were in politics in New Delhi, I would be worried by the growing mood of cynicism towards government.

Build a bridge

I read in your paper of Dec. 20 a small item headed "Science Illiterates", which was based on a Science Council of Canada report recently compiled. It deplored the lack of awareness on the part of the general public of the role of science and in particular of Canada's contribution to scientific development. This is unfortunate because this country has some first-rate scientists and some first-rate scientific institutions. Her achievements in the field of science have been and are considerable and should be better appreciated. We all have a right to be proud of them.

I have been concerned with this situation for some time, and, when I retired from university teaching a few years ago, I sought to alleviate this situation in part by inaugurating a series of books on science subjects which would be easy to read and understandable by the layman. This series, the Canada Science Series, contains books which are written from the Canadian point of view and illustrated by Canadian examples. So far three such books have been released and others are in preparation.

The response to this venture by libraries and the public has been most gratifying and is a clear indication that there is a demand on the part of the layman for [illegible] information, provided it can be presented in an interesting form.

Victoria can boast among its residents a number of retired men and women of exceptional experience — many with a great deal of expertise in some branch of science or technology. I would like to suggest to them that they might find it a very rewarding experience to write a book on their specialty aimed at the educated layman or senior high school student. There is at present a lack of such books in Canada, and the communication of scientific ideas to non-scientists would be a valuable contribution to society. It would be helping to build a bridge between the arts and the sciences.

Should any of your readers be interested in taking up this challenging task, I would be very happy to hear from them. My telephone number is 598-3103 and I am generally available in the mornings until 11:30 a.m. or after 5 p.m. — Dorothy Harper, 2706 Heron Street.

Trigull worthwhile

I feel I must correct several errors in Mr. Branegan's letter (Not for Canada), published in your paper Jan. 3, concerning Trident Aircraft Limited.

I am an employee of Trident, but my comments are not those of Trident Aircraft. They are, instead, the comments of a Canadian pilot.

Mr. Branegan quite correctly stated that the present products of Canada's eastern aircraft firms, Canadair and de Havilland, were not designed specifically for Canadian markets. He did not mention that the airplanes in question already have worldwide sales of some $1 billion (U.S. funds). Both aircrafts' sales show no signs of slowing in the immediate future.

Any Canadian business which aims solely at domestic markets is cutting itself off from a market many times larger than the Canadian economy can offer.

Mr. Branegan correctly pointed to the success of McDonnell Douglas's Toronto plant. He did not mention that the plant equipment was paid for almost entirely by Canadian taxpayers. Nor did he mention that any profits generated by the firm's success are returned to its American owners.

Mr. Branegan stated he did not believe that Trident can sell the Trigull. Trident has nearly $500,000 in deposits on hand, accounting for all of the firm's production until late 1981.

Mr. Branegan asks why Trident doesn't build "normal" float/wheel aircraft. As a pilot and a professional aircraft designer, I must state that the float/wheel aircraft is far from normal.

None of the float planes we see in Canada today were designed to operate from the water. Without exception, they are aircraft designed to operate from runways. Floats were added as an afterthought, to increase the market for the aircraft. The weight of the floats decreases the load the aircraft can carry, the struts and wires attaching the floats slow the aircraft, just as they slowed biplanes many years ago. Of course, the customer must pay extra cash for all these additions.

Finally, to adapt the aircraft for what Mr. Branegan calls "real Canadian usage", wheels are added to the floats. Again the aircraft's useful load decreases, the performance decreases, and the customer pays more.

The reason so many of these "normal" aircraft were sold in the past was the lack of anything better on the market. For the 30 years prior to the Trigull's appearance, no one could buy a single engine aircraft designed from the keel up to operate from runways and water.

Interestingly, the most successful commercial amphibious aircraft manufacturer in the world, Grumman Aerospace, exclusively sold hull-type amphibians. This is the technology that Trident has developed into the Trigull. It is also interesting that Grumman Aerospace invested in Trident Aircraft after thoroughly investigating the Trigull. Their market analysts predict a worldwide market for at least 800 Trigulls. — R. W. Walker, 10287 Rathdown Place, Sidney.

Family tree

I am doing geneology studies and am looking for someone who may have known my grandparents. Their names are Blanch Patriquin Stevens and William Albert Stevens, and perhaps her brother, Ernest Patriquin and his daughter, Jessie Patriquin.

My grandfather, William Albert Stevens was in the military hospital at Shaughnessy and died before my dad was born in 1922. My father's name is James Walter Stevens and he was born in Mrs. Basse's hospital.

I am looking for someone who may have recollections of them. My dad recalls there may have been an uncle in Victoria and/or the Vancouver area. The name has been erased by the years.

Any information you can provide would be appreciated. — Tari Smith, 1130 West 10th, Medford, Oregon, 97501, U.S.A.

Social Credit lose status?

OTTAWA (CP) — Social Credit, reduced to five MPs in the last Parliament, is in danger of losing its status as a registered political party if it cannot nominate 20 more candidates by midnight tonight.

Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel said Friday night his office in Ottawa has been informed of the nomination of only 29 Socreds. Another candidate is expected to register this morning.

However, unless the total is 50 by 3 a.m. EST Sunday (midnight in British Columbia) the party will lose the right to have its name appear beside its candidates on the ballot. As well, broadcasters will not have to sell air time to the group.

Hamel sent a letter Friday reminding Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy of the deadline under the Canada Elections Act.

Andree Lortie, his executive assistant, said Hamel wrote to Roy because the act says parties which had fewer than 12 members in the last Parliament lose their status if they do not nominate candidates in 50 ridings 30 days before the Feb. 18 election.

Roy told a news conference Friday his party is being discriminated against and "treated like public enemy No. 1.

Roy said Social Credit deserves better treatment than it is getting from Hamel. The party elected MPs from many provinces in the past and has candidates nominated in at least seven provinces so far.

He said the party is attempting to find out how many of its candidates have filed their nomination papers. He added there are actually more than 40.

Hamel said there are two reasons for the conflicting figures.

There may be "a few cases" of returning officers not informing his office of all nominations. His office will canvass them before tonight's deadline to ensure none are missed, he added.

As well, some of the candidates being counted by Socred officials have picked up nomination papers but have not yet officially filed them.

Social Credit spokesmen say they are searching actively for more potential nominees.

FP News Service

OTTAWA — Legendary rail baron William Van Horne might have been seized with the romance of the proposal.

But modern-day transport experts say Pierre Trudeau's election promise to build another rail link from the Prairies to the West Coast through the Canadian Rockies is a potential political and financial nightmare.

"We're stunned," said a spokesman for the transport department, calling the Liberal leader's plan to double-track the Canadian National rail line from Winnipeg to Vancouver by 1988 extravagant, unnecessary and virtually impossible to complete.

The words might have jumped out of the pages of history. Exactly 100 years ago, when the charter for the country's first transcontinental railway — the so-called Canadian Pacific Rail backbone of steel — was being signed, the government was inundated with warnings that it was about to start pouring money into a bottomless muskeg.

Liberal transportation critic Ed Lumley has estimated the cost of the project at $800 million. An aide to Transport Minister Don Mazankowski put the figure Friday at between $1.5 billion and $2 billion.

CN officials are refusing to comment on the proposal, saying they have no intention of becoming embroiled in the rhetoric of an election campaign.

Although caught off-guard by Trudeau's statement Thursday in Saskatchewan, they did agree to speak privately to transport department bureaucrats late that day.

Medical fees crackdown vowed

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — A New Democratic Party government would force Canadian doctors to stick to charging provincial medicare fees or risk losing patients, NDP Leader Ed Broadbent promised Friday.

Broadbent also said his party would end the practice of using health care premiums to help finance medicare programs in Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia — the only three provinces using this system.

Medical insurance, he said, should be paid for out of taxation.

The party's platform on medicare won Broadbent his most enthusiastic support of the week as he travelled by bus Friday to Hamilton, St. Catharines and Welland.

Broadbent said the party's proposals would prohibit doctors who charge more than negotiated fees from participating in provincial medical insurance plans. Federal financing would be cut off to any province which allowed doctors to charge extra.

The proposal is based on a system in Quebec, which has kept to a minimum the number of doctors opting out of the provincial plan to charge higher fees. If patients chose to go to doctors outside the plan, they would not be reimbursed for a portion of that bill as they now are.

"Doctors in Canada can't have it both ways — half in and half out," he told a spirited crowd of about 1,000 persons.

Campaigning in Vancouver, Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau said Alberta didn't always agree with his government on energy prices but "they knew they could expect a square deal from us."

In a fiery response to a heckler at a packed Liberal nomination meeting in Vancouver-Quadra riding Friday, Trudeau said Prime Minister Clark had not been able to reach an oil pricing and tax agreement with Alberta during his six months in government.

The heckler had challenged Trudeau to say what his energy policy was in the midst of the former prime minister's attack on Clark's proposals to raise the excise tax on gasoline and push up oil prices at the wellhead.

"After more than six months in office, Mr. Clark hasn't been able to agree with Mr. (Alberta Premier Peter) Lougheed on the kind of tax that he's going to impose."

this kind of uncertainty," he said.

Attacking Trudeau, Finance Minister John Crosbie said Friday the Liberal leader should explain how his party will finance campaign promises the Progressive Conservatives estimate will cost $6 billion.

Crosbie, completing a visit to the Vancouver area, said in a speech to the B.C. and Yukon Chamber of Mines that Trudeau owes voters an explanation of how he would pay for higher pensions and new rail lines and reject Conservative plans for energy price increases without increasing the federal deficit.

Clark agrees to no press

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister Joe Clark has joined sides with Liberal Party leader Pierre Trudeau and has urged the television networks to agree to Trudeau's request that journalists not be involved in a leaders' debate.

The Corporation Of The District of Saanich

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

ZONING BY-LAWS AND BLENKINSOP VALLEY RESOLUTION AREA EXCLUSION

NOTICE is hereby given that all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the following proposed by-laws and Blenkinsop Valley Resolution Area Exclusion will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the Municipal Council on the matters contained therein at a PUBLIC HEARING to be held in the COUNCIL CHAMBER, Saanich Municipal Hall, 770 Vernon Avenue, on MONDAY, January 28, 1980, commencing at 7:00 p.m.

(a) "ZONING BY-LAW, 1978, AMENDMENT BY-LAW, 1980, No. 4394".
To rezone a portion of Lot 1, Secs. 92 & 136, Lake District, Plan 12265, (4688 Prospect Lake Road) from Zone District A-4 (rural) to Zone District M-1 (industrial). Consideration of the above was adjourned from the Public Hearing of January 14, 1980 to this Public Hearing.

(b) BLENKINSOP VALLEY RESOLUTION AREA.
The Municipal council will consider a proposal to exclude the following lands from the Blenkinsop Valley Resolution Area:
That portion of Lot B of Part 16, Section 32, Victoria District, Plan 907, west of the Creek. (4035 Cumberland Road)
This exclusion would place the above property within the urban Containment boundary.

(c) "ZONING BY-LAW, 1978, AMENDMENT BY-LAW, 1980, NO. 4406".
To rezone a portion of Lot B of Part 16, Section 32, Victoria District, Plan 907, (4035 Cumberland Road) from Zone District A-1 (rural) to Zone District RS-4 (detached housing).

(d) "ZONING BY-LAW, 1978, AMENDMENT BY-LAW, 1980, NO. 4407".
To rezone Part West Part Lot 17, Sec. 32, Victoria District, Plan 907, (4021 Cumberland Road) from Zone District A-1 (rural) to Zone District RS-2 (detached housing) and to rezone Lot 1, Section 32, Victoria District, Plan 19648, (east side of Cumberland Road at intersection with McKenzie Avenue) from Zone District A-1 (rural) and RS-6 (detached housing — 780m²) to Zone District RS-2 (detached housing — 560m²).

(e) "ZONING BY-LAW, 1978, AMENDMENT BY-LAW, 1980, NO. 4408".
To rezone Lot B of Lots 21 and 22, Section 39, Victoria District, Plan 1572, (1597 Church Avenue) from Zone District RS-2 (detached housing) to Zone District C-6 (office commercial).

(f) "ZONING BY-LAW, 1978, AMENDMENT BY-LAW, 1980, NO. 4409".
to rezone Lots 24, 25, 26, 27 and 28, Section 49, Victoria District, Plan 1477 (660, 658, 654, 650 and 648 Hess Crescent) and Lot A, Section 49, Victoria District, Plan 29598, (4088 Douglas Street), from Zone District RS-2 (detached housing), P-3 (Church) and P-4 (Assembly) to Zone District P-3 (Church) and P-4 (Assembly).

A copy of the proposed by-laws and Blenkinsop Valley Resolution Area Exclusion may be inspected at the Municipal Hall, 770 Vernon Avenue, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday, except Statutory Holidays.

Direct oil deal with Iraq

HALIFAX (CP) — Gulf Canada Ltd. has secured a contract with the Iraq National Oil Co. for supply of 25,000 barrels of oil a day for 11 months from Feb. 1. The oil is for Gulf's Point Tupper, N.S., refinery and the first shipment is due in March.

An announcement from Gulf's Toronto headquarters released here said it is believed to be the first time a Canadian oil company has dealt directly for supplies with a Middle East producer.

The deal was ironed out at talks with the Iraqi State Oil Marketing Organization last week in Baghdad, Gulf said.

Last month, the company announced a supply contract with the Venezuelan state oil company.

The Point Tupper refinery had been supplied with Iranian oil before Iran cut off all supplies to Gulf.

Thomson lays back as FP debate wanes

TORONTO (UPC) — Thomson Newspapers Ltd. held formal control of FP Publications Ltd. today, but a spokesman said chairman Kenneth R. Thomson has no immediate plans to become actively involved in the eight-newspaper chain.

Thomson, who holds the British title Lord Thomson of Fleet, does not expect to take an active role in management of FP "until we have all the facts about the operations," Thomson Newspapers president John Tory said Friday.

Thomson's control of FP was confirmed Friday at the end of a week's extension to his $164.7 million offer for the chain.

Thomson was tendered a majority of both voting and equity shares Jan. 11 in a dramatic bidding war with Montreal financier R. Howard Webster. No further shares were offered during the week's extension that expired Friday.

"We ended up with all of the shares, except Howard Webster's and the voting Sifton shares," Tory said. "Nothing has really happened as a result of the closing of the offer. It's been a week now, although it feels like it's been a month.

"The percentages are what they were — roughly 79 percent of the equity, and 54 percent of the voting shares."

Webster, a former owner of FP's flagship, the Globe and Mail, has decided to retain his interest in FP — 20.6 percent of the 1.9 million equity shares and 23 percent of the 1,448 voting shares.

"Mr. Webster thinks it's a good investment," said business associate William Ferguson. He added Webster's decision proved he was not simply trying to boost his selling price when he bid against Thomson.

Webster would have received about $34 million by accepting Thomson's final bid.

Ferguson said Thomson was pleased that Webster would continue his involvement with FP.

Thomson's takeover of FP was not affected by legal action taken in Winnipeg this week by June Sifton against Invictus Ltd., a holding company for some of the Sifton family interests in FP.

Mrs. Sifton asked the Manitoba Court of Appeal to order a lower court to block the sale to Thomson by Invictus of equity shares held in trust for 15-year-old Victor Sifton.

Tory would not discuss the possible effects of the court action.

"I suppose anything is possible, but . . . I shouldn't speculate about that," he said.

"We have the agreement of Invictus, which is the Sifton holding company, to sell all the Sifton non-voting shares to us. We certainly relied on that."

Meanwhile, in Toronto, Liberal finance critic Herb Gray said Friday the federal government should go ahead with a combines investigation of the Thomson Newspapers Ltd. takeover of FP Publications Ltd., even though government officials have concluded such an inquiry is not warranted.

In a telephone interview from Windsor, Ont., Gray said Allan Lawrence, minister of consumer of corporate affairs, should be concerned about the economic and social consequences of Thomson's latest acquisition.

Gray said the Combines Investigation Act, the federal legislation governing corporate mergers and business practice in Canada, has limited powers, but it does give the minister some latitude in cases such as Thomson, including ordering an inquiry.

"This is serious enough that such a narrow view should have been taken and I call on the minister ... to order the director to hold an inquiry," Gray said.

Gold leaps past $800

HONG KONG (AP) — The price of gold climbed to $823 U.S. an ounce here today after soaring more than $100 on European markets in the biggest single-day leap in the history of bullion trading.

An troy ounce of gold for London delivery sold for $823.67 at the end of Hong Kong's half-day trading session today, up $13.02 from Friday's close. It had opened at $798.62 an ounce.

Amid growing concerns over tensions in Iran and Afghanistan, the metal reached a record $845 Friday in trading on the Zurich exchange before closing at $840 an ounce, $109.50 higher than Thursday's close.

At the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for January delivery rose to a high of $850 before dropping back to $822, up $20 from Thursday's close. In trading at Republic National Bank in New York, gold peaked at $840 an ounce Friday. Late in the afternoon, the bank quoted gold at $808 an ounce, up from $792 the previous day. Analysts attributed the drop to profit-taking ahead of the weekend.

Hong Kong gold reached a record $832.97 an ounce Friday before settling down to close at $810.65.

"The speculators have gone crazy," one London gold dealer said as the metal's price continued to drive toward the once-unimaginable $900 mark.

Soaring gold 'a latent time bomb'

By LEONARD SILK
New York Times

NEW YORK — The price of gold, which was still pegged at $35 an ounce until December 1971, reached $220 a year ago and now, on the wings of a fever, has soared over $800 an ounce.

What explains this fever, verging on panic? In a sense, there is no rational explanation; all panics can be regarded as a form of madness, in which a reasonable cause for action is turned by fear into irrational flight. The reasonable cause for much of the earlier rise in the gold price was inflation. As the dollar and other paper currencies depreciated in relation to the goods they could buy, gold held its value because of its scarcity. As Adam Smith observed in the Wealth of Nations, its scarcity derives from the very small quantities "which nature anywhere has deposited in one place, from the hard and intractable substances with which she has almost everywhere surrounded those small quantities, and consequently from the labor and expense which are everywhere necessary in order to penetrate to and get at them."

Hence gold at least holds its own against other commodities, and climbs in value against a rising flood of paper money and credit in times of inflation. In what might be called "normally inflationary" circumstances — in which there is no gold panic — commodities hold their value against each other and against gold.

But today something abnormal is going on in the gold market. As Alan Greenspan, who served as chief economic adviser to former President Ford, has noted, gold has been climbing a lot faster than other commodities. In effect, there has been a flight from commodities as well as from currencies.

This suggests that some explanation other than fear of inflation is behind the immediate soaring of the gold price. People and businesses, Greenspan suggests, are fleeing from stores of value (whether they be money, commodities, houses or land) that require an intermediary, such as a government, a bank or some other financial enterprise, to validate their claim.

Hence a special premium has emerged for the protection and anonymity. Gold is a store of value that governments cannot freeze (as the United States government froze Iranian assets) or easily confiscate (as new governments in the Middle East, or perhaps the Soviet government might yet do, depending on how political and military events go in that part of the world).

The heaviest demand for gold has been coming from the Middle East, because of fears of war or revolution, and because the sharp climb in oil prices in the past year has created enormous pools of money desperately in search of safety.

How high could the gold price go? No economic logic can provide the answer. Gold could soar to the moon or go into a tailspin. Political events, and the appetites and fears of gold buyers, will provide the answer. Political stabilization, combined with more effective economic stabilization by governments, would start to bring the gold price down, and as it descended, many gold holders (not necessarily Arab sheiks or businessmen but those Americans, Europeans and Japanese who were out to make a killing) would unload and the gold price would plummet.

How dangerous to the world economy is the soaring gold price? One danger is that gold at its swollen values will seriously worsen world inflation. The gold holdings of the world's central banks, which total about one billion ounces, have soared from $220 billion a year ago to more than $800 billion today.

If that enormous increase in central bank reserves were monetized, it could have an explosive inflationary effect. "This potential threat clearly exists," says Greenspan. "While there are no immediate inflationary implications evident from the rapid acceleration in the price of gold, this could be a latent time bomb which could be triggered at a later date."

If the Federal Reserve and other nations' central banks keep a firm rein on the growth of money and credit, the swollen nominal value of world gold reserves would have slight inflationary effect. But if nations succumb to the temptations or pressures to use their gold at its inflated values to cover deficits — whether in their national budgets or in their balance of payments — the gold would indeed have an inflationary impact.

The gold fever, signifying a flight from both currencies and commodities, has reinforced the urgency for national governments to pursue noninflationary monetary and fiscal policies — no easy task in the midst of a major political crisis, with a threat of war, and another phase of the energy crisis looming ahead. There is no gimmick that can solve the problem.

Production dip in U.S. crude

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. crude oil production fell by 2.2 per cent last year from the 1978 total as conservation efforts and mild winter weather combined to reduce demand for gasoline and heating oil, the American Petroleum Institute reports.

In a year-end estimate, the industry group also said oil companies' 1979 deliveries of gasoline from refineries, pipelines and major bulk storage terminals dropped to seven million barrels a day, down by 5.1 per cent from 7.4 million in 1978.

But with an increasing number of new cars requiring unleaded fuel in order not to foul air-pollution equipment, deliveries of unleaded gasoline increased by 11.5 per cent to 2.8 million barrels a day.

A barrel is the equivalent of 170 litres.

The institute said gasoline prices, up by about 60 per cent during 1979, as well as federally mandated new-car fuel economy regulations, helped reduce U.S. gasoline use.

U.S. crude oil production was an estimated 8.5 million 170-litre barrels of oil a day last year, the institute said, down from 8.7 million in 1978 and 8.2 million in 1977.

Domestic crude oil output peaked at 9.6 million barrels a day in 1970 and had dropped steadily through 1976 to 8.1 million barrels daily.

Imports of crude oil and petroleum products fell by 0.4 per cent last year to 8.17 million barrels a day from 8.2 million in 1978. Daily crude oil imports alone were up by 2.3 percent, however, at 6.3 million barrels.

Prices quoted are per person in Canadian dollars. These Wardair flights depart from Vancouver International Airport. They are chartered by International Vacations Ltd. (Intervac) under the Advance Booking Charter provisions of the Air Carrier Regulations and have been approved by the Air Transport Committee of the Canadian Transport Commission. A non-refundable deposit of $50 per person must be received by Intervac within 7 days of booking. Balance of fare payable no later than 42 days prior to departure or at time of booking. Not included Canadian Departure Tax (payable with balance of fare) and applicable foreign taxes. Fare Protection Insurance available from Intervac for $8 per person. Aircraft type subject to change without notice. Book 30 days in advance. Only round trip flights can be booked.

A little Wardair Class goes a long way. So if you're planning a trip to Britain or Europe this summer, go with the airline that offers the kind of inflight service other airlines charge extra for.

We'll treat you to a full course steak dinner, served hot from the galley on china dinnerware. We'll cook your steak to your liking – rare, medium or well done; offer you a choice of imported wines with dinner and tempt you with our irresistible desserts, followed by liqueurs and coffee. And during the flight, the bar is open for drinks, beer, soft drinks, juice, coffee, tea or milk.

Wardair Class also means you'll be encouraged to get up and stretch your legs because we want you to explore the attractive interior of our spacious, wide-bodied aircraft – a Boeing 747 or a DC-10.

It's all part of Wardair Class service and it doesn't cost a penny extra.

We accept Visa, Master Charge, and American Express.

Sonics fans are proof that winning pays off

So winning isn't everything, eh? Seattle Supersonics won the National Basketball Association championship last spring and guess who is leading the NBA in attendance this time around? The Sonics, that's who, with an average of 20,346 at home after the first 21 games, which is up from last year's average of 16,761 for the same period. The big story, however, is that the Sonics are more than 6,000 above the second-place team, Boston Celtics, who have played before a home average of 13,842. The low is New Jersey at 5,671 through games of Jan. 6. Of course, the Sonics are also leading the Western Division. And that helps.

Weather may have knocked out most of the outdoor sports hereabouts and on the mainland this month, but more than six inches of snow couldn't stop the standardbreds from running at Cloverdale. Naturally, the mutuel and attendance figures showed a marked decline, but still, as proponents of the sport have often said: standardbreds can, and do, perform under the most severe conditions. Incidentally, with the second leg of the Western Canada Driving championship on at Cloverdale today, the B.C. contingent of Joe Hudon, Keith Linton, Grant Hollingsworth and Clarence Gagnon went into the action with a lead over their prairie compatriots. Hudon was the individual leader on the first leg at Calgary with three winners in five races.

And also, Keith Waples, one of the Cloverdale track owners and a member of the Canadian Racing Hall-of-Fame, had a narrow escape from serious injury last week when the colt he was jogging was killed in a head-on accident at the track. Which can happen and the story goes that one time in Eastern Canada two horses going in opposite directions collided head on and both were killed. And that is why horses going in one direction are supposed to take the outside of the track and those going in the other direction, the inside, when warming up, or jogging, or whatever. On the track, Hollingsworth is still the leading driver with a .394 percentage and the new darling of the punters is Senga Gaygirl, the bay filly having won three in a row.

Speaking of racing, Vancouver is the site next week of the annual racing conference of the National Association of Canadian Race Tracks. An estimated 300 horse racing officials are expected to attend. The theme: Racing — Its Security, Its Integrity.

In addition, five persons, including jockeys Ron Turcotte and Hedley Woodhouse will be inducted into the hall-of-fame. Turcotte, who hails from Drummond, N.B., is still in a wheelchair after a tragic accident July 13, 1978. In a spill at New York's Belmont Park, Turcotte suffered paralyzing back injuries. He is determined to climb out of the wheel chair one day, but his doctors have cautioned him against being overly-optimistic.

Turcotte's greatest days came aboard Secretariat when he rode "Big Red" to the triple crown. Before he suffered his crippling injury, Turcotte rode 3,032 winners, was second 2,897 times and third 2,559 times. His mounts have earned more than $28.6 million.

Woodhouse, a Vancouver native, made his name in New York and Miami. He enjoyed a long riding career. He rode his first winner at Lansdowne Park in 1940 and his last at Miami's Tropial Park in 1971.

Stu Keate may be retired as publisher of the Vancouver Sun but, sports fan that he always was, he's still active in that field. Keate, along with Lorne Davies, Athletic Director at Simon Fraser; David Heliwell, president of B.C. Resources Investment Corporation; former Times staffer Jim McKeachie of CP Air Public Relations, and Fred Winn of the Canadian Legion's Pacific Command, have been named the Board of Trustees of the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame & Museum.

Hmmm! I wonder if Stu still plays his golf right-handed and putts left?

And, with everyone editorializing about the Russians, Afghanistan, and the Olympics, there is this sobering thought.:

I think I'd prefer the Olympics to the possible alternative.

G'nite all.

Super what? Rams who?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Rams are orphans in the Super Bowl. In fact, the Super Bowl was shunted to the background Friday, barely 48 hours before kickoff.

Few of the thousands of reporters and radio and TV broadcasters who have descended on Southern California to cover the National Football League championship are taking the Rams very seriously. Barely one-quarter of the writers polled thus far believe they will win.

The fact the team has already fled Los Angeles to take up residence about 50 kilometres to the southeast in Anaheim (across the street from Disneyland) has drawn more attention than the fact they're playing Pittsburgh Steelers on Sunday.

And drawing even more attention than that at NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle's news conference on Friday were:

— The possibility Al Davis, boss of Oakland Raiders, might try to move his team to the Memorial Coliseum vacated by the Rams. Rozelle said he would consider taking action if Davis attempts to do so without seeking approval from his fellow owners.

— The possibility Oakland defensive back Jack Tatum might be penalized for admitting in a recent book that he tackles with intent to do bodily harm.

— The fact that Memphis, Birmingham, Jacksonville, Phoenix, Indianapolis and Honolulu are among prime candidates for expansion in the 1980s.

— That the net-point differential, a procedure to determine playoff teams (it put Chicago in and kept Washington out this season) was highly controversial and might be dropped further down the ladder of tie-breaking steps.

— That the use of instant replays to aid in officiating is highly unlikely, barring any major improvements in technology.

Few questions during Rozelle's 75-minute news conference, which followed news conferences by Super Bowl coaches Chuck Noll of Pittsburgh and Ray Malavasi of Los Angeles, had anything to do with Sunday's game.

Rozelle said he was pleased his pre-playoff prediction had been borne out, that either Pittsburgh or Dallas would fall by the wayside, thus infusing new faces to the championship game and averting an instant replay of last year's Super Bowl involving the Steelers and Cowboys.

He also said he was dismayed by the 11-point spread in the betting line that has Pittsburgh such a heavy favorite. "But when I realized that the sun coming out this morning was a three-touchdown underdog I felt pretty good," the commissioner said, referring to the rain and generally overcast weather that has plagued the area for the last few weeks.

Malavasi, whose Rams are in their first Super Bowl after failing four previous times to win the National Conference championship, cautioned, "Our team is not as bad as we're made out to be and Pittsburgh is not as good as it's made out to be."

AUTOGRAPH-SIGNING was part of the action for members of Goodwill Celebrities basketball team that played Mt. Douglas Rams before overflow crowd of 800 Friday at Mount Douglas. Walt Passaglia (15), wide-received for football's Winnipeg Blue Bombers who scored eight points as Celebrities nipped Rams 66-62, signs autograph for young fans. Walt's brother, Lui, placekicker with B.C. Lions topped winners with 17. Also with Celebrities were Lions Al Charuk, Frank Landy and John Blake, and Victoria athletes Dave Thomson, Kevin Alexander, Dave Mick, Rob Guenter and Mark Smith. (Alex Barta photo)

Read edged in thriller

WENGEN, Switzerland (Reuter) — Switzerland's Peter Mueller consolidated his bid for the World Cup downhill ski title Saturday in a thrilling wafer-thin win over Ken Read of Calgary on the famous Lauberhorn track.

Mueller, surviving an early fright when his lower ski slid away and almost upset him, hit top speed in a long, gliding traverse through forest midway down the exacting 4,290-metre course and rocketed home in two minutes 30.56 seconds.

This was just two-hundredths of a second faster than Read, who immediately preceded Mueller, and set a record for the Lauberhorn to mark the 50th rate of the longest track in the World Cup circuit.

Read, 24, who won here Friday by almost the same meagre margin, came second in 2:30.58, and another Canadian, Steve Podborski, 22, of Toronto was third in 2:30.66 minutes.

Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., was 19th in 2:33.56 while Robin McLeish of Kanata, Ont., was 42nd in 2:38.59. Mike Irwin of Calgary was eliminated from the competition.

Mueller's win consolidated his position at the head of the World Cup downhill standings with a total of 96 points, followed by Read with 86.

Slalom specialists Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein and Swedens' Ingemar Stenmark, neither of whom raced Saturday, remained at the top of the over-all World Cup rankings with 110 and 93 points respectively.

But Mueller climbed from fourth to third place with a score of 87 points and Read jumped from seventh to fourth position with 79.

Jocelyne may coach

MONTREAL (CP) — Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., says that she may coach the women's golf team at Arizona State University.

Streifel, Jacob lead bowlers

Bette Streifel and Jake Jacob won the fivepin awards during the 13th week of competition in the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Both Bette and Jake rolled their division-topping series at Town and Country Lanes.

Streifel staged a blazing finish to capture women's laurels, closing with a 355 game after earlier counts of 231 and 189 for a 775 series in the Friday Fun League.

Jacob displayed remarkable consistency as he earned men's honors with a 293-309-293 — 895 series in the Wednesday Majors League.

Running is road to balanced lifestyle

Runners are turning out en masse for the Sunday morning (9:30) training clinics at the YM-YWCA on Courtney as the nine-month countdown to the Royal Victoria Marathon set for Sept. 20 gets into stride.

Attention during the clinics and the weekly runs that follow them is directed toward preparing you for your first full-scale marathon and includes proper warm-up and warm-down procedures, diet, clothing, and more.

The benefits of a regular running program are many and the importance of physical fitness is now widely recognized. The trend today is reverting to a healthy, more balanced lifestyle. Health food stores flourish, people include more sports activity in their leisure time, and running is a favorite topic of conversation among the rapidly growing numbers of enthusiasts. Generally speaking, more people are taking good-healh habits seriously!

Everybody can run and the earlier you start the better. It doesn't cost a lot and you need very little in the way of equipment. What you do need, however, is a firm resolve to stick to your program. Follow the instructions in the Royal Victoria Marathon Training Manual to a T and listen to the advice of the professionals and you'll have no problems whatsoever. Pay no attention and you can soon forget your noble intentions.

If you injure yourself or neglect your training, you won't succeed in reaching your goal — which, of course, is to finish the marathon.

You must learn to pay close heed to the signals your body gives you. Remember, take it slow and easy. This should be your approach if you are new to any form of physical exercise.

You're not competing with anyone except yourself. If you chose to ignore the correct methods, you'll be defeated by no one but yourself.

Keep your expectations down at first. Those benefits we've talked about will come gradually. You must be patient.

We've mentioned, albeit very briefly, the importance of warm-up exercises before going off on a run. This is done with gentle exercise and stretching to literally "warm" the muscles. Muscles stretch easier and contract faster when they're warm.

Royal Victoria Marathon

The purpose of a warm-up is to help prevent injury from any sudden motion or twisting. Muscles are less likely to snap under pressure if they are limber.

Again, warm up slowly. Stretch slowly. Avoid jerky motions and bouncy motions which only cause tension. Your muscles are like rubber bands. As they are pulled and snapped back, they try to stretch and contract at the same time, resulting in a push-and pull action that could easily cause a tear.

Don't push yourself past your level of pain tolerance. If you are stretching and you feel pain, stop! Don't strain to touch your toes. Instead, slowly straighten up and try the stretch again. If you feel tight, proceed with another exercise.

However, if you can complete the stretch without feeling pain, straighten up and do it again. If muscles are more tense than usual, they sometimes require additional stretching to loosen them. Don't rush your warm ups. All stretches must be performed gently and slowly.

Perhaps you will want to time your runs to give yourself an incentive. Set your own course records and reward yourself with imaginary prizes. This will keep the activity varied but don't get carried away. Races should be low key until you build up to more strenuous ones.

Don't underestimate the importance of correct warm-up and warm-down procedures. They involve a mental as well as a physical commitment. Never rush into any exercise without preparing for it. Most injuries suffered by runners are a result of inadequate warm-ups and warm-downs.

Since you'll be tired at the end of your run, the stretches afterward are important for relaxing tight muscles.

For the first exercise, squat down on your feet and raise your toes. Then, lie on your legs with your feet straight back beneath you. Using your arms for balance, stretch your body back until you can touch your head to the ground behind you.

If this hurts a bit, go slowly until you're used to it. You may also attempt a toe touch from a sitting position. Just bend from the waist and touch your toes with your hands. Bend a little farther and try touching your knee with your nose.

You can stretch calf muscles by standing up and leaning forward on one foot. Stretch outwards using your back foot. As a final exercise, you can touch your toes from a standing position.

Both warm-ups and warm-downs are part of getting in shape. Warming up increases the blood circulation which carries oxygen throughout the body. Muscle fibres must be stretched gently to stand up to the stress.

After the run, as your body shrinks a little due to fatigue, you must stretch once again to get the muscles back to a relaxed state.

As your heart rate, which has increased greatly during your run, cannot shut itself down, you must slow it down during warm-down to avoid hyperventilation, cramping and fainting.

You now know the score. Be realistic about setting goals. In the following weeks, you'll discover more and more information on running — the dos and don'ts — so listen to your body. Follow the advice of the training professionals dutifully.

Perhaps you've already noted some improvements. These should be all you need to provide the incentive to follow through your running program.

Oh yes, try to ignore that white rain, as runners often refer to it. Dress warmly, in layers, and be cautious of the traffic. Otherwise, keep on as usual.

And good luck!

(One of a series)

With love and lady luck

By The Canadian Press

Vancouver Canucks broke a six-game National Hockey League losing streak Friday night — thanks in part to a oung blonde lady who revitalized goaltender Glen Hanlon.

Hanlon, the brilliant young goaltender who gives new meaning to the word hyper, blocked 33 shots and got some help from the top of his goalstick, the crossbar and centre Thomas Gradin as the Canucks gained a 2-2 tie with Buffalo Sabres at the Pacific Coliseum.

In the only other game Friday, Rogatien Vachon recorded his third shutout of the season as Detroit Red Wings blanked Winnipeg Jets 5-0.

Hanlon, who has played most of the Canucks games, looked somewhat unsteady in the last two — 6-4 and 5-3 losses to Toronto and Atlanta respectively.

Hanlon took the losses and the criticism of his play hard.

"The other night after the game (Wednesday against Atlanta) I was going to go home and commit suicide," he said. "But I went out and had a beautiful date with a blonde the next night and that's the only thing that kept me in this world.

"Now, I've got to go out and find a blonde before every game to keep my mind off it."

The unidentified blonde did something to get Hanlon's mind back on track as the red-haired goaltender looked extremely sharp against the Sabres, particularly on saves off Rick Martin and Ric Seiling the in the second period.

Hanlon also got lucky when a hard drive by Martin deflected off the top of his goal stick and again when a blistering slap shot by Gil Perreault careered off the crossbar.

Just before the end of the period, Hanlon got some help from Gradin who moved into the vacant net to block a shot with his midsection after Hanlon had been pulled out of position making two difficult saves.

Vancouver took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Stan Smyl and Don Lever who slipped shots by the stick side of a shaky Don Edwards in the Buffalo goal.

Smyl's goal at 8:15 was his 16th of the year — two more than he had all of last year — and came on the Canucks' first shot of the game. Lever's 20th goal of the season came with the Sabres playing two men short.

Perreault pulled the Sabres to within a goal when he backhanded in his 25th marker while the Sabres were enjoying a man advantage.

Don Luce scored the tying goal — his eighth of the year — at 14:12 of the second period when batted in his own rebound while fending off a Vancouver defenceman in front of the net.

In Winnipeg, Vachon had to block only 21 shots as the Jets were shut out for the 10th time this season. The loss also was the their third in a row.

Dale McCourt led the Wings offensively, scoring the first and last goals of the game and adding two assists. Mike Foligno, Vaclav Nedomansky and Willie Huber also scored for Detroit.

The Wings held period leads of 2-0 and 5-0 as they concentrated on ensuring Vachon's shutout in the final period. The veteran netminder had to make only three tough stops.

Vikes need overtime

University of Victoria Vikings got the scare of their Canada West men's basketball life against UBC Thunderbirds in Vancouver Friday night, but survived.

The Vikings today can thank a missed foul shot that they are still undefeated in league play after being forced into overtime before beating the Birds 81-75.

On top by eight points with just over two minutes to play, the Vikings saw the Birds rally to within one point as time was running out and then get a bonus foul shot situation.

Thunderbird forward John Croockewit went to the foul line with two seconds to go in regulation time and his team behind 70-69. He sank his first shot to tie the score but missed the second.

Also at Vancouver, the Vikettes continued their winning ways with a 75-41 win over the UBC Thunderettes. It was the 23rd straight win for the UVic girls.

Billy Loos had 18 points and Ted Anderson 16 to lead the Vikings.

Trix Kannekans' 22 points led Alberta Pandas to a 64-51 victory over Lethbridge Pronghorns and Lori Chizik's 14 points helped Calgary Dinnies beat Saskatchewan Huskiettes 66-54.

In other men's games Perry Mirkovich struck for 25 points as Lethbridge Pronghorns clipped Alberta Golden Bears 101-84 and Fred Koepke's 26 points helped Calgary Dinosaurs defeat Saskatchewan Huskies 111-81.

VIKINGS (81) — Craig Higgins 2, Eli Pasquale 14, Chris Hebb 7, Ted Anderson 16, Gerald Kazanowski 15, Billy Loos 18, Tom Narbeshuber 5, Kelly Dukeshire 4.

THUNDERBIRDS (75) — Brad Findlay 25, John Stark 17, John Croockewit 3, Rob Cholyk 15, Jim Coady 2, John Doughty 4, Rob Forsyth 9.

VIKETTES (75) — Carol Turney-Loos 21, Cindy Smith 15, Donna Digby 10, Sue Shaw 8, Sandi Lewis 6, Tracy McAra 6, Luanne Hebb 7, Jane Boe 2.

THUNDERETTES (41) — Agnes Baker 16, Michelle Lanford 6, Jane Waddell 6, Kathy Bultitude 5, Denise Simard 4, Sharon Staples 2, Jamie Alexander 2.

First place at stake

By all rights, Victoria Cougars should move back into first place in the Western Division of the Western Hockey League tonight when they host New Westminster Bruins at Memorial Arena.

The Cougars, trailing the leading Portland Winter Hawks by one point, have beaten the Bruins eight straight times this season and haven't lost here to them in two years.

That's the good news, the Winter Hawks having been stunned 7-0 in Billings, Friday, and the Bruins being willing to play patsy again.

And the Bruins may be smarting a bit because Seattle Breakers handed them their 35th defeat of the season at Seattle, Friday, 8-4.

The bad news for the Cougars is that defenceman Lenny Dawes will be lost to the club for an estimated four weeks because of an operation on a pinched nerve in his right foot.

That will cut the Cougar defensive corps to four — Bob McGill, Mark Robinson, Tony Feltrin and Rob Jacobson.

Also missing tonight will by Randy Zinn, sidelined with bruised chest muscles. Zinn is expected back next week.

In other games, Regina blanked Saskatoon 5-0 and Calgary edged Lethbridge 4-3.

Storm halts play

PHOENIX (AP). — Jack Renner, 23, playing before the worst of the winds and cold rain showers swept the course, scrambled to a five-under-par 66 and established the lead Friday in the uncompleted second round of the $300,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

The storm and lightning forced a halt to the day's play with 26 players still on the course. The round was scheduled to be completed this morning.

"PLAYLAND CURLING CLUB" PLANS AHEAD!

The Directors of Playland Curling Club are pleased to announce the election of Les Brice as President.

Les Brice—young, aggressive, an active curler and sportsman, and one of the original founders of Playland, is already working on plans for club improvement and an enlarged membership.

CURLING — Curling, a recreational sport for all ages, continues to grow — and because of its importance — and the new leagues planned — Playland has just ordered the latest in ice maintenance equipment.

"The Ice King Scraper"

INDUSTRIAL PARK — With the advent of industrial zoning for its 10 acres of land, Playland can now plan for development of much of this acreage — leaving the club and the parking lot intact for recreational use.

BANQUETS, DANCES, ETC. — With ideal catering facilities, staff, lounge and banquet rooms, and ample parking, Playland will continue to host Banquets, Dances, Wedding Receptions and Meetings in the years ahead.

Yes, PLAYLAND PLANS AHEAD — to a new and exciting future — and those interested in forming a curling league, joining a current league, planning a shorty spiel, banquet, dance, wedding reception or windup function should phone Harvey Mossop for full particulars.

Hodge rink scores twice; Conn, Wilkinson surprise

Veteran Harvey Hodge of Victoria Curling Club skipped his rink to two victories in the opening draws of the South Island Seagram's mixed curling playdowns at Playland Friday night as 19 rinks opened bidding for four places open in the Island final.

Hodge came from behind to edge Pat Marshall of Esquimalt 9-8 in his first game and then turned back Tom Campbell of Juan de Fuca 9-6. Playing with Hodge are Eileen Beech, Randy Tervo and Paula Patzer.

Doug Conn and Gary Wilkinson of Victoria Club provided the upsets of the evening.

Conn edged Al Frame of the Racquet Club 6-5 in an extra end and Wilkinson shocked Brad Clarke of Victoria Club 8-4.

Frame was a qualifier in the Island mixed final last year and only last week skipped his men's rink to a berth in the Zone final of the Labatt's Tankard competition. Clarke last week won a berth in the Island men's final

Another mixed zone finalist from '79, Rob Cummings of Victoria Club took a big early lead and then hung on to defeat Lowell Goulden of Juan de Fuca 9-6.

In other games, Gordon Carmichael of VCC downed clubmate Al Carlson 9-4, Don Matheson of the Racquet Club defeated Jack Anderson of Juan de Fuca 7-4, Steve Skillings of Victoria Club trimmed Doug Benedict of Victoria 8-2, Tim Horrigan of VCC defeated Len Bjola of Juan de Fuca 11-5, Clarke won from Garry MacDonald of Juan de Fuca 7-4 and Benedict defeated Fred Zacek of Playland 6-5.

Play continues today with the "A" finals set for 7 p.m. tonight. Sunday's "B" draws are at 10 a.m and 1:30 p.m.

IN BASKETBALL, Terry Kurvers scored 25 points for Dunsmuir Demons in a 75-60 victory over Stelly's Stingers in local high school boys' play and Brent Truet and Bob Brown each scored 18 points as Reynolds Roadrunners defeated St. Michael's University School 67-60. Terry Burger-North scored 26 in a losing cause for St. Mikes.

In girls' action, Gillian Poole scored 12 points to spark Parkland over Lambrick 53-27 and Sue Walton scored 21 points as Oak Bay tripped North Surrey in an exhibition contest.

On the mainland, Nanaimo Islanders were upset 75-72 by St. Jerome of Kitchener, Ont. in the St. Thomas More tournament while Kamloops High School pulled the shocker of the meet with a 77-73 triumph over No. 1-ranked Richmond Colts. Belmont Braves defeated Hillside of West Vancouver 98-83 in a consolation game.

At North Vancouver, Cowichan Thunderbirds moved into the final of the Brittania boys' tourney with a 74-71 win over Kelowna. Greg Walters scored 25 points to set the scoring pace. In Burnaby, Spectrum was blasted 85-29 by McNair Marlins of Richmond.

In the city police junior girls' tournament at Lansdowne, Cedar Hill trimmmed Claremont 53-13 and Lansdowne walloped Stelly's 61-28 in a display of scoring strength. In other championship games, Reynolds edged Oak Bay 35-34 and Colquits defeated Arbutus 55-40.

In consolation play, Oak Bay defeated Lambrick 41-5, Stelly's downed Belmont 40-24, Arbutus won from Dunsmuir 74-20 and Claremont defeated Spencer 48-20.

IN HOCKEY, Brian Orr and Bruce Jeffries each scored two goals for Esquimalt Legion in a 9-6 South Island Junior "B" Hockey League victory over Lake Cowichan Bairds Trucking.

Les Layton, Mike Smith, Tom Turnbull, Mark Greir and Mike Bradstock also scored for Legion. Ron Hughes with two, Robin Frost, Glen Smith, Tim White and Kevin Polkinghorne scored for Lake Cowichan.

In the annual Racquet Club bantam tournament, defending champion Powell River scored four goals in the final five minutes to defeat Nanaimo 6-3.

In other games, Saanich defeated Juan de Fuca 8-2, Kerry Park downed Racquet Club 5-2 and Fuller Lake blanked Port Alberni 5-0. The 10-team, round-robin tournament continues today and Sunday.

Defenders trail

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Heather Kemkaran, a much more poised and confident competitor than she was a year ago, took another step toward regaining the Canadian women's figure skating title Friday with a strong short program.

Kemkaran, the 1978 champion who was dethroned last year by Ottawa's Janet Morrissey, increased the lead she had taken in Thursday's compulsory figures by placing a strong second in the short free-skating event.

Morrissey remained in second spot after the short program, which is worth 20 per cent of the total mark, while Debbie Albright of Toronto displaced 12-year-old Tracey Wainman of Toronto in third place.

The standings in the men's section remained the same after their short program with Gary Beacom of Toronto still in front, followed by defending champion Brian Pockar of Calgary and Gord Forbes of Brockville, Ont.

Barbara Underhill of Oshawa, Ont., and Paul Martini of Woodbridge, Ont., had a healthy lead on the way to a second pairs title.

Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., two-time senior dance champions, continued on their way to a third victory by placing on top in the set pattern dance.

Neil Giroday of Vancouver claimed the junior men's crown. Vancouverites Tracy Wilson and Mark Stokes won the junior dance.

Kerry Smith of Calgary came from behind in the junior women's free skating.

Darryl Clark of Courtenay, representing the Racquet Club of Victoria, grabbed a slim lead over Ontario rival Lloyd Eisler in novice men's figures while North Vancouver's Susi Unden was in front after novice women's figures.

After compulsory dances in the novice dance section, the Victoria pairs of Carrie Hawkes and Darryl Halton were in 13th place, one position ahead of clubmates Rhona Soutar and Clark.

If a provincial election were held today, who would win?

That question was asked in a B.C. survey tacked on to the end of a federal Gallup poll last October. The results, kept confidential until now, are startling.

Of decided voters, 49.5 per cent said they would vote NDP while only 39.6 per cent favored Social Credit. The remainjng 11 per cent was split evenly between Liberals and Tories.

The NDP, who commissioned the question, are understandably shy about publicizing the answer. They fear publicity could result in another one of those traditional backlashes that occur whenever the socialists come knocking at the front door.

"Splendid fellows, you know," as the Colonel would say, "but I wouldn't want my sister voting for one."

The shift to NDP is not unexpected. Between elections the opposition looks far more solid than it really is. Only this time there's a joker in the deck.

The October survey was taken just before the Lettergate-Dirty Tricks scandal blossomed into full glory. The first developments had not yet had the chance to sink in.

Since then the Dirty Tricks revelations have permanently damaged the public's image of Social Credit. True, the party has withstood greater blows in the past. The Sommers saga, for example.

But today's electorate is more sophisticated and less forgiving than the voters who were mesmerized by W. A. C. Bennett.

Even if Bill Bennett holds off going to the people for another four years, he will still be carrying a muddied banner. Will it make a difference? Probably not.

Don't expect radiation from Dirty Tricks fallout to affect the incorrigible Socred supporters. They'll burrow a little deeper into the closet but they'll come out in time to vote the way they always have.

Any realignment will take place among the political swingers, the uncommitted 20 per cent of the voting population whic really decides who governs B.C.

And by election time even the most astute, elephant-memoried voter will surely have something more current, more vital to focus on.

For example, there is a distinct possibility that by the time we're called to the polls there will be two different leaders at the head of the opposing armies.

It's no surprise that the NDP is promoting the idea of an anti-Bennett coup within Social Credit while the Socreds are equally anxious to discuss the prospect of Dave Barrett being dumped.

There's no doubt that Bennett is in trouble for his mishandling — more accurately, his non-handling — of the Dirty Tricks affair. He's already casting nervous glances over his shoulder at certain members of the cabinet.

If Bennett can withstand a challenge, and so far no white knight has appeared on the horizon, the bottom line of the entire Dirty Tricks balance sheet will be a slight rise in the Socred Sleaze Index. Seasonally-adjusted, of course.

Dirty Tricks may provide background music but it will not be a decisive factor in the next election. Two, three, four years from now people will wonder what the excitement was all about.

Barrett, meanwhile, is battling against time.

If there is an election within 18 months, Barrett will march at the head of the NDP. If the Socreds hang in for much longer, the old warhorse likely will be unable to withstand the internal pressure for a younger, smoother, sharper leader.

Stu Leggatt already carries the aura of the annointed.

The NDP so far has been blessed by Socred ineptitude. They've done very well by declining comment and letting the Socreds do it to themselves, rather than attempting to exploit each new revelation.

Only in private do they ask about Bennett, McCarthy and Campbell: which is Larry, Curly and Moe?

The laughter goes on behind closed doors. The NDP is suffering from a serious attack of smuggery.

However they've also been stockpiling ammunition.

A revitalized NDP research staff has been hard at work putting together the ingredients for incendiary questions to be exploded in the house during the spring session which opens in early March.

The Socreds will be hampered by the fact that they've fired all their caucus researchers. Or as they prefer to put it, they've reorganized their caucus staff.

However they put it, they've thrown away an important weapon just when they need it most.

With the government expected to bring in a light legislative program — Bennett will save the real goodies until he starts thinking election — and with the opposition loaded for bear, it looks like a very one-sided session.

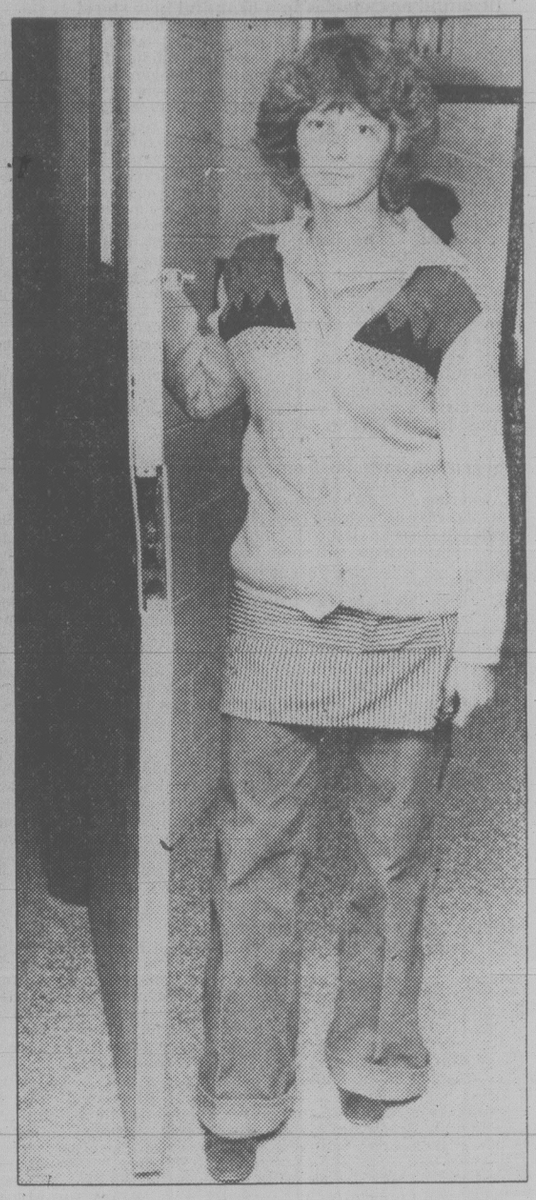

As for Dirty Tricks, the old song says it all:

"In the meantime
In between time
Ain't we got fun?"

Youth Detention Centre director Del Phillips, left, shows padlocks being used as temporary measure while security officer Carol Hamilton holds damaged door.

Juvenile home damage $200,000

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Inmates have caused so much damage to the Youth Detention Centre since it reopened in October that all the doors, some windows and the entire locking system are having to be replaced.

The cost of the job is expected to reach almost $200,000.

That's over and above $406,000 the B.C. Building Corporation has already spent this year on renovations to the facility at 1125 Pembroke.

The cost of the new system has shocked the BCBC.

Says BCBC property mansger Gil Gilmore: "These kids are operating on a level of destruction we haven't experienced before.

"They've completely tested the security system."

Gilmore said specifications are now being drawn up and tenders will be called shortly for the new hardware which includes 30 new doors, 12 steel window frames, 20 Lexan plastic plate windows, 26 electronic cell locks, and 40 security deadbolts.

Delivery is expected to take at least three months.

The doors are expected to cost about $60,000, locks $30,000 and deadbolts $12,000.

Because the new system will use more electricl power, a stand-by generator must also now be purchased, for security reasons, at a cost of $30,000.

Gilmore said the changes were recommended by RCMP security consultants hired by the attorney-general's ministry to look into security problems at the trouble-plagued centre.

The new cells doors, made of 18-gauge steel plate, have been bent and warped by inmates kicking and throwing themselves at them.

The steel mesh covering the windows in cell doors has been removed by inmates working the mesh with their fingers.

Gyproc sheets in the activity rooms have been punched in and must now be replaced with plywood.

And inmates have discovered that while they can't break the new plastic Lexan windows they can pop the panes out of wooden frames if the span is greater than two feet.

But the biggest problem has been the locking system.

Director Del Phillips said it has proven inadequate.

When the renovations were being planned, BCBC decided to go for a medium-priced system. Now it is being forced to consider the top-priced one, a difference of from $600 a door to $2,000.

Phillips said the system failed because of the unexpected problems that arose simply by changing the cell doors from swinging inwards — as was originally the case — to swinging outwards — as is required by fire safety regulations.

Inmates quickly discovered that by pushing and kicking at the door they could spring the lock. Before it was impossible to push open the door because the jamb was in the way.

The same problem exists in the fire doors at the end of the two cell blocks. Before the renovations there were no fire exits.

As a stop-gap, corrections staff has had to order deadbolts for cell doors. The cells are then padlocked.

The same thing has been done with fire doors but the inmates discovered the locking assembly was only screwed into the metal plate door and the unit could be pried off.

The deadbolts were then put on the outside, but the fire department felt that would pose a hazard if there was a fire and asked that they be re-installed on the inside.

The YDC has been operating at well above its capacity of 20. Last week it had 29 inmates; on Friday, 27, of which six were sentenced and the rest awaiting trial.

Thieves get cash and coat

Thieves broke into four downtown businesses overnight and wound up with about $220 and a sheepskin coat.

The businesses included New Zealand Imports, Trounce alley, where the $400 coat was taken, Sager's Maple Shop, 1802 Government, where about $200 cash was taken from the till, Vibery Boots, 662 Herald, where $20 in silver was stolen and Gibson's Ladies Wear, 708 View which reported no loss.

Saanich backs off Minnie case

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Saanich council decided Friday not to oppose an attempt to appeal the controversial Minnie Mountain housing development bylaw in the Supreme Court of Canada.

The decision not to fight the move by the Cadboro Bay Residents Association was made against the advice of municipal solicitor Chris Nation and Victoria lawyer Rodney Taylor.

Nation and Taylor recommended Saanich join developers Broadmead Farms Ltd. in opposing the application in Ottawa Jan. 22.

If the applicant is successful, the appeal will go before the Supreme Court.

Aldermen said they feel that as elected representatives of the municipality they can't deny a group of municipal residents the right to secure an appeal of the bylaw allowing the 72-acre mixed residential development at Ten Mile Point.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said council could not go on with the case without considerable public expense.

"I'm not interested in seeing us waste any more money," Couvelier told aldermen during the hour-long meeting.

The residents' association wants to appeal a B.C. Appeal Court decision overturning an earlier decision by the B.C. Supreme Court quashing the bylaw.

Association president Dick Boss says area residents don't want to see apartments or townhouses built on the site, but don't mind single family dwellings.

Broadmead plans an ultra-expensive 210 unit complex including tennis courts and a park, which will be open to the public.

Lawyer Taylor, who is handling the case for Saanich, told council he doesn't believe the association will be granted the appeal because their case is "completely without legal merit."

Taylor warned council its failure to join Broadmead in opposing the application could mean a breach of faith action.

It could take 18 months to resolve the issue and if the three judges rule in favor of Broadmead, Saanich could find itself facing a very large damage claim, Taylor said.

His information contradicted a report by Nation, who said Saanich couldn't be held in breach of the land use contract by simply not opposing the application.

"For Saanich to be liable, Broadmead would have to show that Saanich had breached some term in the contract or that Saanich had by its actions repudiated the contract. In my view there is no term in this contract requiring Saanich to oppose the application."

If the bylaw is quashed, the land use contract is no longer valid and any rights Broadmead had would expire, Nation pointed out.

However, he said that he believes Saanich should oppose the application.

"I firmly believe that a municipality has a duty to do everything it can to uphold its bylaws in the face of a legal challenge." Nation said.

Trident gets Trudeau OK

Pierre Trudeau has pledged that if re-elected he will honor the former Liberal government's financial commitment to Trident Aircraft in Sidney.

Gerry Kristianson, Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Trudeau feels the company should not be placed in jeopardy because of the Conservative government's failure to live up to the agreement.

The government withdrew its previous offer of $4 million in grants and loans saying the company altered the terms of agreement and thus nullified its contract.

The company laid off 107 employees last week

Kristianson said the Trident closure has developed as a major issue in the riding.

He said regardless of whether he wins or loses in his fight against Conservative incumbent Don Munro, a Liberal government will be elected and will follow through and keep the aircraft firm operating.

"He (Trudeau) was already aware of the Trident issue," Kristianson said.

The 'eyes' don't always have it

By AB KENT

Eyewitness testimony — even when faulty — can be overwhelmingly believeable to trial jurors, an American psychologist said Friday.

Dr. Elizabeth Loftus, 35, a specialist in the human memory at the University of Washington, told an audience of 175 students, lawyers and psychologists at University of Victoria that more and more U.S. trial lawyers are calling expert psychologists to court to challenge the reliability of eyewitness accounts.

Loftus said systematic distortions come into play in the human memory despite efforts by people to be honest and thorough in recalling past events.

"Credibility is based more on how confidently the witness gives his evidence than on what the witness actually says," she said.

Loftus said the way a person recalls an event is often determined by the types of questions asked.

For example, she said the difference between the indefinite and definite article such as 'Did you see the broken headlight?' or 'Did you see a broken headlight?' greatly influences the response.

Loftus said juries should scrutinize details of any eyewitness testimony, looking for corroboration or supporting evidence.

LOFTUS

"Unfortunately juries tend to accept eyewitness testimony almost on face value."

Loftus said recollection is a combination of the actual experience and subsequent constructions and inferences of what happened.

"Stress, fear and arousal all affect recollection, too, as does a person's prior experience and history," she added.

Loftus said people generally recall things to make them look more favorable, or to give themselves higher status albeit without any intention to warp the facts.

In some U.S. courts judges have refused to allow psychologists to give evidence on the reliabiblity of eyetwitness accounts.

Some fear it would be an invasion into the province of the jury while others have held it inadmissible because it would be comment on the evidence.

But Loftus, who recently published a book on the subject — Eyewitness Testimony — said it is vital for juries to understand the fallibility of memory.

In an interview later she said the notion that memory is a permanent thing — as espoused by Freud — is being contested by new research.

Memory is ever-changing, constantly undergoing a series of distortions, she said.

For instance older people don't remember the events of their childhood any more accurately than the events of more recent periods.

The elderly may have a fixation on a particular event but the recollection is likely more imaginary than real.

And there's no way a person can enhance his memory.

"A person can learn tricks on how to use his memory," she said.

"But he can't acquire a better memory. It's not like a muscle. You can't build up memory cells."

With DOROTHY FRASER

Beautiful new clothes in a beautiful new store! . . .

How nice it is to be able to start a new year with a new addition to the fine roster of stores we write about! . . . This one is Amselles Fashions Ltd. . . . a perfectly delightful new ladies' dress shop in the 747 Fort St. complex, just across the mall from the Montreal Trust . . . It's a pleasure to walk into, with its attractive decor whose focal point is an interesting carved wood fireplace from an old Victoria estate . . . real marble counter tops and pillars . . . bright, roomy fitting rooms which open out to a larger room walled entirely with moveable mirrors so you can see yourself from every conceivable angle . . . and closed with rose velvet curtains for privacy while husbands are taking their ease on one of the comfortable settees outside! . . . Green hanging plants add to the general impression of luxury and relaxation! . . . But naturally you also want to know what you can buy at Amselles . . . Well, the two young women who run it . . . Norene Chevrier and Bev Tull . . . are highly experienced ladies' clothing buyers . . . who've retailed fine clothing in several of our most prestigeous shops . . . so they certainly knew what they were about when they bought their stock! . . . One exclusive line of French blouses, skirts and pants which no one else in town has is from Serge Nancel of Paris . . . Beautifully fitting clothes you'll adore owning! . . . Not cheap, but on the other hand, not exhorbitantly priced either! . . . Why not make a point of visiting this lovely store real soon? . . . Amselles, 747 Fort St., 386-4422.

Sheepskin bargains from "down-under" . . .

Some of the best buys in town right now are to be found at Alcheringa's . . . whose third annual sale is now in progress . . . If you crave a sheepskin coat, now's the time to get one while the prices have been slashed by either 25% or 15% . . . They're going fast, but there are still some beauties left, for men as well as ladies . . . These coats are unbelievably lightweight and warm . . . Hand-crafted in new Zealand from superbly tanned skins . . . Then there are sheepskin car seats in two different styles . . . both of which fit any car seat . . . at a 20% reduction . . . and "Baby Care" sheepskin blankets . . . a "must" for every well-cared-for baby . . . are also reduced by 20% . . . All these sheepskin things, we might add, (with the exception of the coats), are machine washable, and have quite extraordinary properties such as keeping you warm when it's cold, and cool when it's warm . . . Some cozy sheepskin cushions also have had their price tags slashed . . . And while they're not on sale, Alcheringa's sheepskin innersoles to put in your boots have been going like hot cakes this past while . . . they're still cheap at only $3.50! . . . More tempting bargains at 10% off regular prices are opal and sterling silver rings by Peter Minturn of New Zealand. They're really beautiful and quite different in design from anything else you'll see . . . and Triton Australian seashells dipped in sterling silver, hanging from sterling chains . . . N.B. for spinners: Colored raw fleece reduced from $4.25 to $3.50 per lb. at . . . Alcheringa, 616 Trounce Alley, 383-8224.

Spring arrivals at Roy Imports . . .

One of the many things we like about Roy Imports is the expert way Marlene takes different items and puts them together resulting in stunning outfits and combinations! . . . For instance, this week Roy's received a shipment of Horst Mandel coats and suits from Berlin, Germany . . . Anyone who knows this label knows how finely tailored Mandel clothes are . . . Well, she took a white wool wrap coat and teamed it with a navy and white Glaser polyester jersey dress from England . . . for as stunning an ensemble you could hope to see! . . . The navy dress has tie neck . . . is sprinkled with white motifs which graduate in size from small at top to larger at the bottom . . . both of these are size 12, and are extremely wearable! . . . Other new Glaser Jersey Supreme dresses in classic 2-pce styles have arrived too . . . as well as other Horst Mandels . . . one a navy suit in fine wool boucle with very nice detailing . . . Chanel jacket with mandarin neck . . . size 10 . . . A grey suit with a flutter of pleats plus slit in front skirt . . . A magnificent Eva Fisher suit in fine wool crepe . . . Mandarin collar, invisible closing, slight padding and tucks on the shoulders . . . and half-pleat with slit in the front of the skirt . . . Most of these things are one-of-a-kind, and if you don't find it in the James Bay store it'll be at Sidney . . . Roy Imports, 435 Simcoe St., 384-4932 and 9807 Third St, Sidney 656-3522.

First of the new Bleyeles . . .

It's always an occasion for clothes-lovers when the new season's Bleyle arrive in town! . . . We saw the first of the new season's crop at Charmante's last Monday . . . A very attractive group of skirt suits and pant suits, plus some separates . . . The skirt suits took a new tack this year . . . they're a blend of cotton and polyester . . . straight skirts with side slit, and two styles of jackets . . . one a belted safari with cuffed sleeve . . . the other a short boxy jacket with turnback cuff sleeves . . . These all come in either a beautiful cornflower blue or a fresh, cool green . . . The pantsuit in the regular bleyle polyester knit is a heavenly shade of Glacier blue. It has a cut away buttoned jacket and narrow tie belt . . . There are both print and plain blouses to co-ordinate with all these . . . Separate pants, skirts with off-centre front slit and jackets like the pantsuit are in light beige only . . . Very smart and versatile . . . A first at Charmante's are the Castleberry knits . . . simple 2-pce. styles in shades of blueberry, tobasco and aqua . . . Straight skirts and long-sleeved buttoned-to-the-neck tops, with tie belts. There's a 3-pce. suit in navy/wheat/white with navy shell, and a 2-pce. navy suit with shawl collar and leather belt . . . Wonderful travellers, these new Castleberrys! . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Give yourself a tasty treat! . . .

Any time of the year is the perfect time to enjoy those yummy confections made by Purdy's . . . and unless you're counting calories madly, as we are at this moment . . . we can't think of a better way to give yourself a bit of a treat during snow or rain or just plain old after-Christmas doldrums! . . . today we're going to tell you about some of the more unusual Purdy chocolates and candies . . . kinds you don't find everywhere, and that practically everyone enjoys . . . There's the fairly new Tiger Butter . . . a mouth-melting peanut confection . . . Peppermint Ice, which is white chocolate wth hard peppermint crushed into it . . . both these at $4.50 per lb. . . . Opera Roll is a special fudge coated in pecans and caramel. Rolls come in various weights all ready to be cut up . . . $5.50 a lb. . . . English toffee is one of our prime favorites . . . Brittle centre dipped in chocolate and rolled in nuts . . . $5.50 . . . Creamy Peanut Brittle, at only $3.50 per lb. has universal taste appeal . . . another favorite is Almond Bark . . . white chocolate filled with whole almonds . . . $5.50 . . . The fudges of various kinds, at $3.50 a lb. come in individually priced packages which include a knife for cutting . . . Choicest of all . . . and wonderful for a nice little gift . . . are the handmade marzipan fruits . . . a European delicacy you don't often find here . . . $8 a lb. and worth it . . . Purdy's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1241, Mayfair Mall, 385-5032 and Empress Hotel, 385-3555.

Charlotte Ford dresses very well priced . . .

We were really surprised when we saw the price tags on the imported Charlotte Ford dresses which have just arrived in Eaton's Signature Shop! . . . Some are pure silk, others are polyester and still others are cotton . . . and there isn't one in the lot that costs more than $160 . . . going down the price scale to as low as $115 for the cotton chemise dresses in red with royal blue trim on the belt . . . or blue with red trim! . . . The silk dresses have all those special little touches which spell 1980! . . . Long, short, or sleeveless . . . some in exciting, vibrant colors guaranteed to cheer you as well as your audience! . . . Noticed a very pretty grey pure silk with a bluebell design . . . violet piping on the collar and other salient points . . . $160 gets you this little beauty! . . . A 2-pce. cotton/polyester suit has an inverted pleat in front and hip detailing on the skirt . . . Chanel jacket with two slash pockets . . . This smart Charlotte Fort suit comes in either a pretty shade of blue or in cinnamon, at $155 . . . A magenta pure silk sleeveless wrap style dress is only $135 . . . A poly/cotton suit with a waistlength jacket and wrap skirt would look darling on a shorter woman . . . It's a tangerine shade and costs $140 . . . Saw some pure wool short reversible "cuddle coats" we think you'll like . . . double-faced blanket cloth bound with woven braid in blue and cream or tan and cream . . . also full length in tan/cream and navy/red at . . . Eaton's Signature Shop, 382-7141, loc. 242.

Getting married in 1980? . . .

Judging by the number of girs we see heading for Eaton's Bridal Registry these days . . . we're inclined to think the smart young women of 1980 are all making Eaton's their Stop One once they've decided to tie the knot! . . . It's such a sensible thing to do too . . . because not only do the experienced bridal consultants at Eaton's provide you with a Preference List . . . taking in everything you'd enjoy receiving as wedding and shower gifts . . . but they'll give you advice on priorities . . . how much of everything you'll need to set up house . . . how to combine colors . . . and show how your choices of china, crystal and flatware will look on a table together! . . . You can also choose and order your wedding invitations etc. right on the spot . . . Just take our word for it . . . going to Eaton's Bridal Registry will be the best thing you've ever done . . . No cost either . . . they even give YOU gifts! . . . Think what a relief it will be to your friends when they need only to nip in to Eaton's Bridal Registry to find out exactly what you'd like come wedding time! . . . Such a wide range to choose from . . . and they can get their purchases beautifully wrapped and delivered . . . Eaton's will pack and mail small gifts out of town to! . . . Eaton's Bridal Registry, 382-7141, loc. 373.

How to make rosettes

By MAY E. MacLEAN

I have been asked several times how to make ribbon rosettes for baby's bonnets, so I suggest you clip these instructions for future reference.

You will need one-inch wide, or 2.50-cm ribbon in the color of your choice. Cut a 14-inch or 35-cm. Place dots two inches or five cm apart along one edge. Place dots on opposite edge, spacing them evenly between the dots on first edge, placing first dot one inch or 2.50 cm from end.

With a needle and matching thread, begin at the edge where the first dot is two inches or five cm from edge, run a basting stitch to first dot on opposite edge (where this dot is one inch or 2.50 cm in from the beginning), then run a basting thread across to the dot on the other edge.

Continue in this way, running a zig-zag line from dot to dot to end of ribbon. Now pull the thread gently, gradually easing the ribbon into a rosette shape. Fasten securely. With your fingers gently ease out each petal until it takes on it's proper shape.

For pom-pons, cut two circles of cardboard the desired size of pom-pon, cut a small hole in the centre of each circle. The size of the centre hole deterimines how full the pom-pon will be.

Place the cardboard circles together. Thread a bodkin or darning needle with a double length of yarn. Pass the bodkin through centre hole, over the outside edge, then through the centre again until the centre hole is filled, continually using lengths of yarn for this purpose.

Place scissors between the edges of the cardboard circles, cutting through outer edges of the yarn. Using two strands of yarn approximately eight inches or 20 cm in length, slip this yarn between the two cardboard circles, pull up tightly and tie securely.

Carefully remove the cardboard circles, then trim the pom-pon to the desired shape. Pom-pons can be made in all one color or you can vary the colors with two or more. In fact a pom-pon made from a number of colors using various thickness and types can give a very interesting effect while using up the oddments you have on hand.

This week's pattern is an attractive crochet afghan made from Canadiana Knitting Worsted or Sayelle. Crochet in blocks of three double crochet to give this interesting ripple effect with four colors. Instructions are given for the afghan and matching bolster pillow.

Now that the Festive season is practically over, this would be a good project to start and have finished while the cold weather is still with us. Afghans are great for throwing over yourself while sitting for just that extra little bit of warmth, and while they are attractive, they can also double up as a blanket.

To order Leaflet No. 0179, send 75 cents, plus a stamped, self-addressed return envelope. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, Quebec, H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. All back numbers of my series are available, price 75 cents each, catalogue of gift and bazaar items, 25 cents. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope or an extra 25 cents.

Cobbling: Who will learn?

The hands . . . tools of the trade

Ancient trade is dying out

Plastic instead of leather, machines instead of handwork.

That's what has replaced the cobbling trade, says a man who has spent more than 30 years making shoes and boots.

Vic Bakiwski said that cobbling is dying out and "nobody is learning the trade anymore.

"And many shoes today are being made out of plastic instead of leather."

Bakiwski decided to become a cobbler when he was seven years old in Poland.

"I was jealous of another boy who always had nice, polished shoes, and I didn't."

When he started as an apprentice, his job consisted mainly of cleaning up the garbage and leather scraps.

"When we were taught the trade it wasn't just how to repair shoes but how to make them."

Nowadays, though, Bakiwski spends most of his time simply repairing shoes which customers bring to his small store. The only exception is that he will make leather shoes which are attached to braces for handicapped persons.

It's mostly repairs these days, not much making of shoes

Vic Bakiwski . . . the old nail-biter

A fat lip for the kisser

TORONTO (UPC) — A 16-year-old who kissed his pet tarantula to show how gentle it was went back to work today with a fat lip for his affection.

"Roach," a spider covered in black and orange hair that's been the pet of Nicky Macy for three years, sank its fangs into the master Thursday as Macy kissed it to show three friends how tame it was.

As the youth's face began to swell from the bite on his upper lip, his alarmed friends called an ambulance.

Macy was released from hospital after observation and doctors said they would wait to see if there was any evidence of poisoning before administering shots to control muscle spasms.

Macy's sister Cathy said Friday her brother was "quite alright. They have to give him a shot of some serum, that's all. They didn't have any in Toronto and he has up to a week to get it."

"Roach" was back in his terranium on a normal diet of live mice and crickets.

Herbal hobby spices life

WILSONVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Yvonne and Gerald Bradley's hobby has added a little spice to their lives. It also has become a full-time occupation.

Three years ago, at age 48, Bradley retired from his position as foreman at the Massey-Ferguson North American implement plant in Brantford, north of this rural town. That was when the urge to grow a garden of fragrant greenery, combined with some pressure from a daughter whose hobbies include cooking with fresh herbs, promoted the Bradleys to test their skills as herbalists.

"Besides," says Bradley, "I thought growing herbs was as good a way as any to keep me out of trouble."

Mrs. Bradley said they also considered purchasing a mushroom farm but gave up on the idea when they learned it was a full 12-month-a-year business which would keep them indoors much of the time.

The herb garden now has expanded to include 18 herbs which form "the culinary mainstay."

Included among the leafy greenery are curly leaf and sweet basil, summer savory, sage, sweet marjoram, purple oregano, tarragon, burnet (often a cucumber substitute in salads) and several members of the extensive family of mint.

All flourish in the one-acre plot of land the Bradleys set aside for their agricultural endeavors.

The herb hobby is as time-consuming as it is satisfying.

"Hobbies like this have a habit of becoming full-time jobs," Bradley notes.

He is one of the few persons in Ontario who cultivate herbs, and several times has been asked to turn his hobby into a full-time business of supplying spice houses.

At present, the Bradleys drive to Toronto markets each week with their harvest of herbs. The demand is strong.

The hobby is not inexpensive, says Mrs. Bradley. Thyme costs as much as $10 an ounce. Sage retails for $6.45 an ounce and one Russian tarragon root cost the Bradleys $5 with no guarantee that the root would flourish.

In addition, there is a substantial charge which the Bradleys must pay to have a greenhouse operator start the growth.

TB still a killer

OTTAWA (CP) — Tuberculosis is still an infectious killer especially among those elderly persons faced with poverty and malnutrition, says a health department spokesman.

Dr. Gordon Jessamine, of the federal epidemiology bureau, said although tuberculosis cases are slowly vanishing, the disease has not been beaten because some immigrants become carriers in their Third World homelands.

But because most of them become ill years after being infected, fears aroused last year about contaminated Southeast Asian refugees should diminish.

wonderful world of animals

DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: My sister's dog's a sweetheart — except don't you dare touch her feet. If you just touch her foot, she'll glare at you, pick it up and she'll snap. Sunny, our new pup, is a lovable friendly little guy, but I notice that even he tries to pull his feet away if you pick them up, and we don't want him to turn out like she did. How do we avoid it? — M.B.

Dear M.B.: In order to keep his disposition sunny, whether you're handling his mouth, his tail, feet, or whatever, start now. Begin with normal petting procedures, then extend them gradually to include first the upper leg, then the middle section, and finally the foot. If the process is gradual and the first contacts of a sensitive area, i.e., a foot, are brief enough, he won't mind. Then praise him liberally and as time goes on, extend the process to where you're actually holding the foot and then briefly picking it up, finally holding it an indefinite period and even massaging it, spreading the toes, etc.

As he accepts this, the session is followed with liberal praise and affection so he is getting continual positive reinforcement. With a very young puppy, you start out by simply handling all parts of the anatomy frequently, and it never becomes a "big deal." One procedure that can spoil such bliss, however, is a carelessly done nail trimming. Should the young animal be subjected to a painful pedicure (when the nails are cut too close), it may qyickly become "foot shy."

Dear Dr. Miller: Let me get this straight. Do cats have tear mites or termites? — M.J.

Dear M.J.: You wouldn't find a feline wooden-headed enough to be attacked by termites. While there are problems in cats that frequently can cause tearing, tear mites aren't one of them. Mites may afflict felines, however, and by far the most common are the ear mites, otodectes. These mites might be suspected when the ear canals become dirty-looking and/or the cat frequently shakes his head or digs at his ears.

Dear Dr. Miller: I was blown away when my mother announced she really liked Rudolf, my rat. My cat used to vomit hairballs and my dog would vomit food. Rudolf never vomits. I think that's why she likes him so much. He won't start now, will he? — A.V.

Dear A.V.: No, he won't. He can't — voluntarily or otherwise.

Dear Dr. Miller: A very irate neighbor from a block away says my male and female cats (neutered) have been in her house several times and mauled her neutered female. She threatened to do away with my cats if she ever found them in her home again. Around my home, my cats are non-aggressive and don't seem venturesone. We both work during the day. What can we do? I'm keeping them in until we can reconcile this, but they are very unhappy. — L.T.

Dear L.T.: Admittedly it's difficult for your outsiders to become adjusted to being strictly house cats, but this really is the answer.

Even if this particular neighbor didn't do away with your cats, another one might. So might a car or some type of poison or other outside hazard they might encounter while making their neighborhood rounds. Cats can enjoy the good life even when kept strictly indoors, but admittedly it does take far more effort to convince them of that when they have to make the switch.

your health

Insomnia: symptom and not a disease

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I've been an insomniac all my adult years. I'm in perfect health. I haven't had an ache or pain in my body that I can recall. I haven't had a day's illness that kept me from my work in 20 years. What I want to know is why my wife insists that no one can live to a ripe old age, on five hours sleep a night. I simply cannot sleep longer than five hours a night.

MR. J.N.

Dear Mr. N.:

You are an unofficial member of a club that includes Napoleon Bonaparte, Thomas Edison, Benjamin Franklin, Charles Dickens, Winston Churchill, James Thurber, Cary Grant, Irving Berlin, Franz Kafka and 20 million other people in the United States alone.

Insomnia is not a disease. It is a symptom. In some instances, its cause is known and alteration of the insomniac patterns can be established. In others, the cause is unknown.

Insomniacs describe their condition in a variety of ways. Some have a long delay in falling asleep. Others, after a few hours' sleep awake and can't return to sleep. Still others awake a few times during the night and then, after five minutes, fall asleep again. Many more variations exist.

The inability to sleep for long periods is not nearly as significant as is the capacity of the individual to during waking hours in a completely adequate way. Most people function well with six to eight hours sleep a night. Children require more sleep than adults. With advancing age, the elderly frequently note that their need for sleep has diminished over the years. Generally, it is said that women require more sleep than men.

When the lack of sleep interferes with a person's efficiency and productivity it is, of course, necessary to track down its cause. People with asthma, angina pectoris, ulcers, and particularly, hiatus hernia often have their sleep interrupted. There are many neurological disorders that interfere with sleep. Emotional problems, personal crises, alcoholism, overuse of tobacco, coffee and tea and abuse of drugs are common causes of insomnia.

In your case, since you are well and seem to be functioning at top level, there is no need to be concerned about changing your sleep habits.

For others, whose efficiency is affected by their lack of sleep, there are excellent ways of breaking the pattern of insomnia. Avoiding daytime naps and evening stimulants can help. The last big meal of the day should be eaten many hours before retiring. Relaxing activity, such as reading or bathing, can also be conducive to sleep. Many people find that by turning on the radio, listening to soft music or the spoken voice, they are able to dismiss annoying thoughts circulating through their minds.

Stop worrying about not falling asleep. That in itself can be instrumental in keeping you awake. When the anxiety about sleep is great there is a tendency to depend on sleep-inducing drugs. Insomnia is not cured this way. If all else fails, there are sleep centres throughout the country that can bring relief to chronic insomniacs.

Got a medical question? Dr. Coleman would be glad to hear about it. Write him c/o The Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4. Sorry, personal replies are not possible.

Muscle in on Motor-Mouth

Dear Abby:

After being a very lonely widower for four years, Dad married last year. He is 87 and in good health. His wife (I'll call her Maria) is 80. Maria is good-natured, pleasant, and not a stupid woman, but she is a non-stop talker. This woman can talk indefinitely unless someone rudely interrupts her and takes over. (I clocked her once — she talked incessantly for an hour and 55 minutes!)

Everyone in the family has run out of excuses to avoid being in Maria's company, which means staying away from Dad, too.

We passed up Thanksgiving and Christmas with Dad because we couldn't take Maria.

She does make a nice home for Dad, and being a rather quiet and patient man, he seems happy with her.

We feel slightly guilty for not seeing Dad because of his wife, but we don't know how else to handle it. Any suggestions?

This letter is signed by his two daughters and their husbands.

Anonymously Yours

Dear Anonymously:

Nothing in this life is free. If you want to give your father the pleasure of your company (and you should), the price is tolerating Maria.

Non-stop talkers usually talk compulsively because silence embarrasses them. Don't hesitate to break in and good-humoredly ask Maria to yield the floor to someone else. Don't let a talkative woman deprive your father of the company of his children.

Dear Abby:

I received a phone call yesterday from my sister-in-law, who returned last week from a trip to the Orient.

She said, "I brought you a gift — when can you come over and pick it up?"

Abby, we both drive, and it's no easier for me to pick it up than it is for her to deliver it.

I don't like misunderstandings or ill feelings with relatives, so I went over and picked it up. Not that it matters, but it was some cheap little thing (made in Hong Kong) that you see in every gift shop in town.

My husband said I was foolish to have picked it up — I should have just let it sit over there until she delivered it. What do you think?

Steamed

Dear Steamed:

To have let the gift "Sit there" indefinitely would have made an awkward situation worse.

Dear Abby:

I am an 18-year-old freshman in college and I live at home. My 18-year-old boyfriend and I like to lie on the couch and watch TV and sometimes just nap.

My Mom says it embarrasses her and makes her feel uncomfortable when we do this. She says it is not proper or in good taste, and it could cause sexual temptations.

She says it's OK to lie on the floor next to each other, but not "snuggled up."

I think Mom is over-concerned, and at my age I should be able to make the decision to snuggle up on the couch with my boyfriend if I want to. I have a nice boyfriend and my family approves of him.

What do you think about the couch, Abby?

Snuggle Bug

Dear Snuggle:

I think you and your Mom are both right. Snuggling up on the couch could cause sexual temptations. And at 18 you are old enough to make your own decisions. But out of consideration to your mother, refrain from doing anything that will embarrass her.

Dear Abby:

It is so difficult to know what is morally right and what is morally wrong these days. What used to be considered wrong 25 years ago is suddenly "right." How is a person supposed to know how to behave?

Perplexed

Dear Perplexed:

Let your conscience be your guide. Strangely enough, we now have about 20 million laws trying to enforce the Ten Commandments.

Need advice? Abby answers all her mail, so write her c/o The Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

common cents

Using a metal spoon to serve food baked in a shiny, white casserole often causes gray marks on the white surface.

Using a steel wool pad to clean the casserole will only add to the problem. The easy way to remove the gray is to rub the surface with a mild cleanser or baking soda.

The working mother of a daughter in the first grade accepted a challenge to make five school outfits for under $50. She did it for under $26. Her 16 hours of sewing over two weeks time produced a dress, jumper, two lined vests, a skirt, two pairs of slacks and three blouses. "Patterns are certainly easier than they used to be and make saving on sewing much more tempting," she said.

At the produce counter: The plumpest cucumbers and summer squash may seem to offer more for your money, but the bigger they are, the bigger the seeds inside. Pick out the heaviest green peppers, and you'll have the ones with the thickest walls. If you can feel individual kernels on an ear of sweet corn, it's probably too mature to have the best flavor.

That brownish soil on the bathroom tile grouting may be mildew not dirt. Scour it off and it'll return. But spray on a household disinfectant, let it stand overnight and you can sponge off the mildew, reports a home economist at the Porcelain Enamel Institute. Give the tile a good spraying once a month and the mildew won't return.

When taking a warm bath on a chilly night, don't pull the plug when you finish. You paid to heat the water, so let it cool to room temperature before draining the tub. Heating experts say that about 10,000 btu's will be added to your home from a tub of water as it cools from 100 to 70 degrees.

Once-white, once-bright colors in washable garments may change color due to sunlight, steam pressing or the detergent you're using. The "bright" may be restored if you wash the dingy garments in a detergent with fabric brighteners. Or rewash them with a water conditioner or even increase the amount of all-purpose detergent you prefer.

So you keep finding new ways to save on food, clothes, energy, but when did you last take an inventory of the half-used shampoos, creams and other cosmetics crowding your bathroom cupboards? That old shampoo can be rubbed into ring-around-the-collar before washing. Use up the creams and lotions at the kitchen sink. An after-shave lotion may not smell great, but it makes a fine astringent.

A pineapple fruit can give you a handsome houseplant as well as delicious desserts. It may, or may not, produce fruits, but its rosettes of toothed yucca-like leaves are attractive, and the plant will do well in a heated home or a heated greenhouse.

When buying the next pineapple don't look for the ripest fruit. Choose one that is firm with the freshest and greenest undamaged leaves at the top.

Slice off the top with a sharp knife (1), together with one row of pip-like protrusions and the flesh attached. Gently remove the flesh with a teaspoon and leave the top lying in a warm place for a couple of days to dry the inner surface.

A clay pot is preferred for rooting, about 7.5 cms (3 ins.) in diameter. Drainage is important for all houseplants and is best obtained by covering the drainage hole with a piece of broken pot, placed with the curved side up as shown at (2).

Cut three pins from a piece of firm wire to hold the pineapple slice in place without moving during the six- to eight-week rooting period. The pins are shown at (2); the long leg goes deep into the pot and the short leg hooks into the piece of pineapple skin.

The rooting mixture is half screened compost and half coarse sand, well mixed together. Have the pot about three-quarters full, then place the cutting on the surface and insert the pins to hold it in position. Put a little more soil over the skin (3) and press it firm with the fingers. Shake the pot and tilt it a little sideways to make sure the cutting does not move; if it does use three pieces of stick around the plant and loop string around sticks and plant.

A constant, steady heat is needed for rooting. If you have a propagating case in the greenhouse the pot can be put in for rooting at 18 degs.C.

If not, use a large polyethene bag (4) supported by two pieces of coathanger wire bent as shown at (5). The two prongs at the base are set in the pot and the offset is wide enough to keep the leaves from coming in contact with the condensation on the inside of the bag. The top is sealed with a rubber band.

Soak the pot in slightly warm water until the soil is well dampened, then let stand for an hour to drain. It will not need more water as long as condensation forms on the bag.

Next, locate a place where the temperature is a steady 20- to 21-degs.C in a fairly good light but not sunlight, and no chance of the pot being jarred for the next six weeks or until roots have started.

Look for roots appearing at the drainage hole in the bottom of the pot, and don't worry if a few leaves should brown and die but remove them before rot sets in.

When rooted, transfer to a 10 cm clay pot (4 in.) containing a mix of screened compost, a little coarse sand and some powdered charcoal. Give warmth and good light and growth should be rapid during the summer months.

Repot as needed in pots one size larger. A fully grown plant will probably need an 18 cm (7 in.) clay pot. During the growing season plenty of water will be needed.

The fruit of the pineapple is carried on a stout stem rising from the centre of the plant (6) after the fourth year. Some local amateurs have succeeded in obtaining fruits when the plants are kept in constant warm temperatures, but usually the fruits are not edible.

Side rosettes of leaves appear from time to time. These can be removed when large enough and rooted to make more small plants.

Next time you buy a pineapple fruit try your hand at growing a plant for your own pleasure and as an educational project for the children.

China severs Russia talks

Times News Services

China said today it was suspending talks with the Soviet Union on normalizing relations between the two countries because of the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

A Chinese foreign ministry spokesman in Peking, while not ruling out resumption of the talks at a future date, said "Under the circumstances it goes without saying that it is inappropriate to hold the Sino-Soviet talks."

The State Department insisted Friday that fighting has broken out in Afghanistan between Russian soldiers and Afghan army troops despite denials of such reports by the Soviet news agency Tass.

Spokesman Hodding Carter III said explosions were heard Thursday in the area of the Afghan capital of Kabul where Red Army forces are based.

"We have two reports saying explicitly that there was fighting between Soviet and Afghan troops," he said.

Carter said reports reaching Washington "indicated that Afghan river ports have been blocked up because of the movement of massive amounts of Soviet military supplies into Afghanistan."

Despite the amounts of supplies, harsh winter weather "is hampering Soviet military operations in northeastern Afghanistan" against the anti-government forces, the State Department spokesman said.

"We have reports of Soviet forces themselves engaged in actual combat with Afghan nationalists, who are attacking (Soviet) units," Carter said. "They (the Russians) are hitting pockets of people with fairly massive force."

The United States made clear Friday that it believes Moscow is in complete control of the Afghan government and raised the question of possibly severing diplomatic relations with Kabul.

"Soviet rather than Afghan personnel are making the ultimate decisions," a State Department statement said.

Meanwhile an Indian press report said Pakistan was strengthening its defences along its 2,000-kilometre border with Afghanistan, but a senior Pakistani official today denied any buildup was under way.

The official, who asked not to be identified, was responding to a United News of India report Friday that Pakistan had deployed seven divisions and a large armored force along the border. The report, quoting military observers in the Afghan capital of Kabul, also said all Pakistani air bases in the region were ordered on alert.

The Pakistani commander of the northwest border region, Lt.-Gen. Fazal e-Haq told reporters Wednesday that he has about 40,000 soldiers from four divisions strung out along the frontier with Afghanistan.

U.S. wooing Iran?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States on Friday reaffirmed its commitment to Iran's territorial integrity and urged Tehran to release 50 U.S. hostages to permit a co-ordinated response to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The state department also sounded a conciliatory note on the hostage crisis by saying it would not criticize proposals for a solution even if it disagreed with some aspects of them.

"Our commitment to their territorial integrity stands despite the violation of international law represented by their continued holding of our people," spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters.

He said relations would improve if the hostages were released, and: "We would be better able to co-ordinate our concerns about Soviet aggression if we had some kind of representation (in Tehran)."

In addition, an early end to the U.S.-Iran crisis would enable the United States to be "better able to understand what they (Iranians) might or might not want us to do in support of their integrity," the spokesman said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh has said the hostages would be released if the United Nations held an investigation into criminal charges against the deposed shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, now in exile in Panama.

He added that the former monarch and his fortune have to be returned to Iran.

Spokesman Carter said Washington is proceeding with economic sanctions against Iran and that a naval blockade still has not been ruled out as a means of forcing Iran to free the hostages.

But U.S. officials hinted that the idea of a blockade has been dropped in the aftermath of the Soviet move into Afghanistan, Iran's eastern neighbor.

Chamber ready to report

Representatives of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce will tell the Capital Regional District on Wednesday how they would run an economic development commission.

Chamber president Cedric Steele said a chamber task force headed by Bob Wheaton, its economic development committee chairman, is preparing a full report.

Since former economic development commissioner Barry Mayhew resigned the CRD has been working toward the program becoming a function for the whole region.

Mayhew's program was jointly financed by the four core municipalities and the provincial government.

Lost hiker walks out to safety

A 14-year-old Nanaimo boy who spent a night on Mount Benson in below freezing temperatures when he became separated from a hiking companion, walked to safety early Friday morning.

Rodney Wargo and friend Jeoff Franklin, 15, were planning to hike to the summit Thursday, but deep snow prevented them from reaching the top.

As the pair were making their descent, Wargo said, Franklin hiked over a ridge while he walked around it.

"I lost him. I walked back around the ridge and all I could see were the lights of Harmac (a local pulp mill). By that time it was dark."

Wargo, who was wearing a down-filled jacket, decided to stay the night on the mountain.

An all night search by emergency services personnel and family members was started at about 10:30 p.m. when Wargo failed to arrive.

Bill, Dixie meet set

Premier Bill Bennett will meet Washington Gov. Dixie Lee Ray Monday in Victoria.

Bennett's press secretary Hall Leiren said Ray wants to keep a low profile and does not want to meet the media.

There is speculation Ray and Bennett will discuss the implications of President Carter's oil pipeline decision which will result in increased tanker traffic through B.C. waters.

Bennett has urged Prime Minister Joe Clark to ask Carter to reconsider his decision.

Plea made for Convair

Esquimalt Ald. Colin Blair has urged the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission to reverse its decision that Convair Coach Lines must halt its bus service between Victoria and Vancouver airport.

Blair said the capital city needs every possible transportation link with the mainland.

Removing Convair's licence will end a valuable service and put Victorians out of work, he said.

"Furthermore," Blair said in a letter to the commission, "the service offered by Convair afforded the people of Victoria an alternative to the scandalous rates being charged by air lines for transpotation between Victoria and Vancouver."

He said effective March 1 the Victoria to Vancouver air fare will go to $35, a rate which Blair called "skyway robbery."

Convair, meanwhile, was transporting passengers from downtown Victoria to Vancouver airport for $14.

Blair said $35 for the 60-kilometre trip from Pat Bay to Sea Island was the equivalent of charging $4,752 between Vancouver and Hawaii.

Blair urged the commission to restore Convair's licence or, failing that, calling a public hearing.

There was a hearing on Convair's licence in Vancouver in November where rival companies called the bus trips a duplication of existing services.

SOLUTION TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, January 20, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hospitals, institutions, way stations, clubs, behind camera duties—these are spotlighted. Aquarius, Scorpio, Leo persons figure in active scenario. Secret is revealed; be careful and discreet. You are on blink of breakthrough which could "set you free."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Wish comes true if you analyze and communicate. Member of opposite sex plays significant role. Changes occur which represent challenge and stimulation. Look beyond the immediate—prospects are brighter than originally anticipated.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can establish "territorial rights." Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently. Family situation, home, property, prestige and life style play commanding roles in your personal scenario. You get morale boost from superior you thought was non-caring.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Longe-range views, travel continue to hold much of spotlight. Accent on consequences, spiritual insights, publishing, special calls, messages. Pisces, Virgo natives figure prominently. Define meanings, insist on factual data, avoid self-deception.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What seems a setback is due to boomerang in your favor. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently—and so does the number 8. Keep diet, nutrition resolutions—moderation now is your ally. Know it, act accordingly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finish with situation that drains you emotionally and risks your financial security. Check legal papers, cement partnership, be aware of needs of one close to you, including mate. You will be given choice—returning to past or stepping forward to future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get "new hope" in connection with service, employment and health. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Member of opposite sex offers constructive counsel. Be receptive! Routine tasks should not be premitted to get "out of hand."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Follow through, teach and learn, regain sense of direction, come to terms with older family member. Cancer, Capricorn, Aquarius persons figure in scenario. Imprint style; your own creativity is more valuable than some people would care to admit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Read Scorpio message for valuable hint. Accent on security, property, relations with one who can aid in closing significant transaction. Highlight versatility, but avoid scattering your efforts. Accept social invitation—important contact [illegible] on.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Relative might want you to become inextricably involved in problem that drains emotionally, financially. Key is to maintain balance, humor and to ask pertinent questions. Money windfall is due—remain free to respond in active, creative manner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Special communication received regarding personal possessions, money. Protect your rights, insist on a valid accounting. Refuse to give up something for nothing. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. The change will prove constructive!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take initiative, confront family member who has been whining, make demands and *exceeding budget resolutions. Be diplomatic, but firm. Remember special anniversary—send flowers or purchase gift. Lunar cycle is high; you're due for a "victory."

IF JANUARY 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are emotional, sensitive, prescient, much attached to family and capable of handling responsibility during crisis periods. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. May could be your most memorable month of 1980, a year featuring accelerated social activities, travel, publishing and pursuit of educational project. You will be relieved of burdens.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, January 21, 1980

ARIES (March 21-April 19): By making proper inquiries, you could gain access to confidential information. Go after story behind story. A "revelation" is due. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. In matters of speculation, stick with number 5.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance, creativity, opportunity to enhance financial prospects are spotlighted. Don't be afraid to get involved. Circumstances turn in your favor; you'll have more responsibility and greater chances for success. Member of opposite sex figures prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): One who "pulls strings" will pave way for your progress. Know it, be confident and insist on definition of terms. Avoid self-deception, see places and people as they actually exist. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Obtain long-range view; perceive potential. You receive communication which heightens financial, business opportunities. Older individual is in your corner and proves it. Capricorn, and another Cancer play key roles. Stick with number 8.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid direct confrontations. Indirect approach brings desired results. Dig beneath surface indications—you are due to make "money discovery." One close to you confides problem. Be understanding, but don't co-sign. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make new starts in new directions. Highlight greater independence of thought, action. Deal with Leo and Aquarius persons. Legal "maneuver" boomerangs in your favor. You will be rid of burden which was not your own in first place. Get ready for celebration!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Intuitive intellect is activated—you will know what to do and when to do it. Accent on basic issues, necessary services, ways to improve work procedures and health. Cancer, Aquarius persons figure prominently. You will regain sense of direction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have greater opportunity for self-expression. Know it, imprint style, apply personal touch. Expand horizons; look beyond the immediate and perceive potential. Travel, publishing opportunities are accented. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives play key roles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stick to basic issues. Be thorough, examine fine print and read between the lines. Review and revise—get rid of superfluous material. Relative in transit gets "in touch." Cancer, Aquarius, Leo persons figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Messages, travel, written material dominate scenario. Member of opposite sex figures prominently. One who feigns indifference will finally show true colors. Emphasize versatility, show that you can be flexible. A trip may be necessary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on investments, personal possessions, payments, the return of "borrowed material." Major domestic adjustment or change in lifestyle is indicated. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. You receive valuable gift.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your natural qualities surge forward and elevate your standing in community. Pay heed to "psychic impressions." Accent on personality, personal appearances, direct appeals and fresh opportunities for success. Another Pisces and a Virgo figure prominently.

IF JANUARY 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are unorthodox, versatile, a natural entertainer and have marvelous sense of humor. You possess intellectual curiosity, are fond of reading, writing and travel. You are more concerned with weight control than the average individual. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. April could be your most memorable month of 1980.

Disco arson plea guilty

Two men have pleaded guilty in county court to wilfully setting fire to a teenage disco club at 1318 Broad which caused more than $135,000 damage.

Anthony John Mettes, 21, pleaded guilty Wednesday to the Oct. 17, 1978, arson when he appeared before Judge Montague Drake. His case was adjourned to Friday when co-accused Paul Leonard Joseph Taylor, 25, now of Burnaby, also pleaded guilty.

Judge Drake set sentencing for both men for Feb. 20.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told Drake when Mettes first appeared that the two men ran the disco and Mettes father put up most of the money. The disco started in July, 1978, but there was a drop in profits in September.

He said Mettes and Taylor gave the same story to police that they had been at the disco on the morning of the fire but everything was all right when they left for Vancouver. They returned, the statements said, when they heard a radio report of the fire.

A month later, Mulligan said Mettes gave a different statement saying he was persuaded by Taylor to participate in the arson because the only way Mettes' father would get any money was from the fire insurance policy.

Mettes lawyer Chris Considine said his client became involved out of a misguided sense of love for his father who had put his life savings into the disco.

Judge Drake, dealing with Taylor, ordered a pre-sentence report to be prepared. Taylor's lawyer Darrel Woods will make his submission Feb. 20.

Sentenced in county court Friday were:

Richard Allen Maddocks, 19, one year for three breakins and theft in October and November, 1978;

Ronald James Sinclair, 31, one year but concurrent with time he is already serving for robbery, for failure to return to William Head Penitentiary on a day-pass last month;

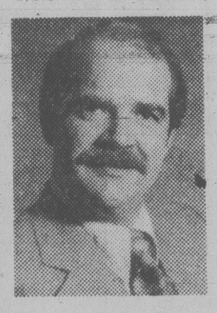

Sean Charles Beecroft, 19, one day plus $100 compensation for attempted car theft in Central Saanich Nov. 4, 1978, and possession of stolen tires and rims, since recovered, in Colwood March 29, 1979;

Edward Charles Lumley, 35, suspended sentence, one year's probation and not to possess firearms for five years, for possession of a shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace Feb. 2, 1979, in Esquimalt.

Before the judge

Bail of $7,500 was set by Judge William Ostler Friday for a 44-year-old man arrested after an incident last Saturday in which the Greater Victoria Emergency Response police team was called out.

William Terrence Popp, of 1028 Summit, is charged with being unlawfully in a dwelling house, unlawful confinement of Carol Ann Popp, assault causing bodily harm to the same person, possession of a dangerous weapon, possession of a restricted weapon and use of a weapon.

Defence lawyer David Lisson elected trial by judge and jury on the charges and Popp was remanded until Monday to fix a date for a preliminary hearing.

Judge Harold Alder levied a $250 fine against a 32-year-old man who attempted to defraud the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

Grant Roger Kalloch, of 52 Crease, pleaded guilty to attempted fraud.

Alder said the fine is about twice the amount Kalloch tried to gain.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court the Kalloch went to ICBC Feb. 21 and reported that four headlights and two driving lights had been stolen from car in front of his residence.

He claimed $125 on his ICBC policy.

A claims investigator went to see the car and was approached by an employee of Budget Rent-A-Car who said he had seen Kalloch remove the lights himself.

When police confronted Kalloch with the information, Laughton continued, he confessed and said he sold them at the swap-and-shop for $50.

Bail was denied to 22-year-old Daniel Norman Christie, of 1178 Lockley, charged with armed robbery of the 7-11 store at Hillside and Douglas, possession of a dangerous weapon, and carrying a concealed weapon.

Defence lawyer Steven Kelliher elected trial by judge without jury and a preliminary hearing date of Feb. 13 was set.

A three-month jail term was given a 33-year-old man who pleaded guilty to his seventh drinking-driving offence.

Lawrence Joseph Fraser, of 3347 Gibb Road, also pleaded guilty to refusing a breath test demand and two counts of driving while suspended.

Law said Oak Bay police stopped for a traffic light at Foul Bay and Lansdowne saw Fraser make a left turn through a red light and chased him.

Fraser was last convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on Jan. 8, 1978, in Jasper, Alta., and had been given a three-year driving ban.

The day after he was stopped by Oak Bay police, Law continued, he was stopped again in the 1200-block Johnson.

Ostler made all sentences concurrent and placed Fraser on 18 months probation.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Elizabeth R. Taylor, 48, address not given, $800; Donald Ivan Kirby, 47, of 3293 Alder, $600; and Stephen Paul Graham, 28, of 205 Island Highway, $500.

Gifts and wishes flood in for contest-barred baby

EDMONTON (CP) — Wanda Johannessen is overwhelmed by the flood of gifts arriving at Riverdale elementary school in Edmonton.

Wanda approached her principal 12 days ago in hopes of collecting money within the school for Eunice Crouter who was disqualified as Camrosé, Alta.'s, first baby of the year because she was illegitimate.

"Sometimes when we do something good, it turns out better than you ever expected," said the nine-year-old grade 4 student.

"I just thought if the school could give a little money, it would be good, that's all."

"But this," she said, pointing to the map of Canada her teacher has made pinpointing all the cities in Canada that the school has received gifts and letters from, "this is really something."

Gifts for the baby — disqualified from the New Year's baby contest operated by the weekly Camrose Canadian newspaper — include a year's supply of baby food, a $1,000 art collection and donations of money now totalling more than $1,000.

School principal Jean McKenzie said donations started arriving at the school after a picture of Wanda in her fight to raise money for the child was published by daily newspapers across Canada.

"The letters are so heartwarming and touching it's incredible," Mrs. McKenzie said.

The mail arriving at the school comes from locations stretching from Victoria to Peterborough, Ont. One letter came from Utica, N.Y.

The baby's' 18-year-old mother is at a loss for words.

"We're so full of gratitude, we don't know how to say thanks anymore," she said. "I can't even cry with happiness anymore I'm so overwhelmed."

Mrs. McKenzie said: "We've got a crumpled letter with a $1 bill just signed — a grandparent. We've received a bar of soap wrapped with a $5 bill and pinned together with a baby pin without a name.

"One old-age pensioner called from Sylvan Lake and said he didn't give a damn about a trustee fund for a mother and baby. He just wanted to know if the mother needed money now."

But the most heartwarming present sent for Eunice and her mother was promise, to forward a Norman Knott painting of a little girl titled New Dawn.

The Ontario artist's painting, valued at $700, will be sent in trust to the children at the school with some other art until Eunice turns 18.

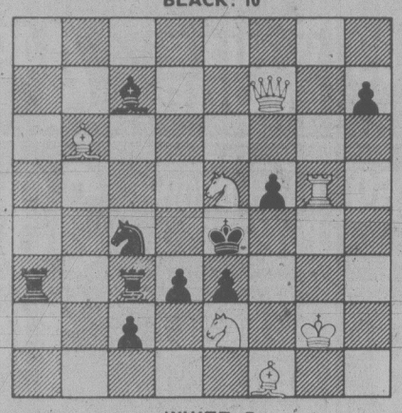

"We've been working every lunch hour this week, sending thank you notes and putting the money together for the trust fund," Mrs. McKenzie said.

"The children in the school have been very interested in this. We do have many children who don't have fathers so this is real to them."

LETTER FROM DENMARK

Whoever thinks that powers always fade fast as the years pass by should examine the example of 87-year-old Sven Jensen, a merry Dane from Vojens. Sven and his wife, Astrid, have just celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary and he took the occasion to write me a brief note:

"I feel the pressure of age but do lots of work in the garden and keep up my interest in music and literature. I just heard the Juilliard String Quartet playing 'The Last Quartets of Beethoven'. I play chess and force my little gray cells to compose chess problems. I'm a bit slower, true, but you understand that the days are running . . ."

CANADIAN CHESS RANKS HIGH

Chess is the second most popular sport in Canada.

The Chess Federation of Canada and the Federation Quebecoise des Echecs jointly commissioned a Gallup study of Canadians. The question was: "How often do you play the game of chess?"

Over 20 per cent of those questioned — a representative sample of Canadians aged 15 and above — said that they played chess at least once a year.

How does that compare with other activities?

The 1976 Fitness and Sport Survey by the Federal Government asked a question on the same basis about other sports.

The results were: Swimming, 32%; Ice Skating, 17%; Tennis, 13%; Golf, 11%; Ice Hockey, 8%; Cross-Country Skiing, 8%; Alpine/Downhill Skiing, 8%; Curling, 5%.

At 20.5 per cent, chess would rank as the second most popular sport in Canada. It also rated above ballet, opera, classical music and live theater as a cultural pastime.

THE CORPORATION OF THE DISTRICT OF OAK BAY

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING

ON AMENDMENTS TO THE ZONING BY-LAW

NOTICE is hereby given that all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the following proposed By-laws will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the Municipal Council on the matters contained therein at a Public Hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, Municipal Hall, Oak Bay, B.C., on Monday, January 28, 1980 at 7:30 p.m.

By-law No. 3303 "Twenty-eighth Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1979"
This by-law proposes to remove all Municipal parks, recreational facilities, municipal buildings and land from the Single Family Dwelling zone regulations, and to create a new "Miscellaneous Purpose Zone" to cover these buildings and land.

By-law No. 3307 "Thirtieth Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1979"
This by-law proposes to regulate the displaying of goods and signs outside shops and stores in the Municipality by limiting such displays to a specified area, in order to provide free pedestrian travel through shopping areas.

By-law No. 3316, "Thirty-first Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1979
This amendment proposed to set requirements for residential businesses, particularly with regard to parking, and legalizes home business permits. It also eliminates the use of a residence for a medical partnership.

By-law No. 3317 "Thirty-second Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1979"
This by-law revises the requirements for appurtenant buildings, such as setback restrictions and permitted distance from dwelling unit. It also includes a swimming pool as an appurtenant building.

Copies of the proposed By-laws may be inspected at the Municipal Hall, 2167 Oak Bay Avenue, Victoria, B.C. between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

X-ray invention cuts radiation

TORONTO (CP) — A new x-ray system that cuts the amount of potentially-hazardous radiation given to the patient by up to 90 per cent has been developed by a Toronto hospital.

Dr. David Hynes, radiologist-in-chief at St. Joseph's Hospital, helped invent the system and is using it on patients every day. He says it is the first working, low-dose fluoroscopic unit anywhere in the world.

A fluoroscopic examination is a type of x-ray, taken with the same kind of radiation, emitted continuously for periods ranging from two to 10 minutes. However, it gives a moving image, which appears like the picture on a television screen and can show processes such as blood flowing through the heart.

Hynes' system reduces radiation as x-rays are given in short bursts instead of a continuous beam and permanent records are obtained by photographing the image from the television sceen, rather than the patient.

Stats chief quits

OTTAWA (CP) — Peter Kirkham, chief statistician with Statistics Canada, is resigning March 31 to become senior vice-president and chief economist of the Bank of Canada, the prime minister's office announced Friday.

Kirkham has been chief since 1975 while the government's official statistics agency increasingly became embroiled in controversy about low morale and unreliable data.

Problems came to a head last November.

Canadian forces off to Rhodesia

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 60 Canadian Forces servicemen and three military aircraft will be sent to Rhodesia at the end of the month to help authorities observing the Feb. 27-29 election there.

defence Minister Allan McKinnon said Friday the team was requested by Britain which is administering Rhodesia during the elections. The elections are to pave the way for independence.

"We are to provide air transport to outlying polling stations for election observers," McKinnon said.

The military personnel will include flight and ground crews servicing three armed forces Buffalo aircraft. The aircraft will fly Commonwealth observers and observers from other countries assigned to see there are no unfair election practices.

In addition RCMP Chief Supt. John Carroll, assistant director of criminal investigations in Ottawa headquarters, will be assigned as a security adviser to the observers, the informants said.

He will give advice on security aspects of the election, they said.

Earlier, Gordon Fairweather, head of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, was named senior Canadian representative on the Commonwealth observers group. He will be assisted by up to 10 other Canadian election experts and external affairs officials.

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Actors will often tell you that they prefer stage to film because they miss the live audience. Bernard Behrens sees it differently.

The Canadian actor has lived five years in Hollywood and says he gets plenty of reaction from the crew and other bystanders after a session in front of camera crews.

"One burly crewman came over to me after a scene one time and said 'Y'know, you made me ball."

Behrens accepted Belfry Theatre director Don Shipley's invitation to Victoria for the title role in Da because it fitted a schedule that had him finishing The Yeagers on location in Idaho. "Besides Hugh Leonard's Da is a wonderful play and it's an irresistable part," he points out.

Behrens

Another "besides" is an old association with Belfry artistic director Don Shipley.

With a gift for dramatic dialogue that suggests the natural story-teller, Behrens puts one in mind of an attractive leprechaun with his animated eyeballs and pungent, sometimes slightly waspish but always engaging humor.

He's had dozens of offers to return to live theatre but has no desire to do so. Film work has been his life-long goal. "I had my movie career planned out since I was about eight years old," he says.

His early life was spent in Winnipeg. At eight he started dancing lessons and eventually managed to overcome a natural shyness enough to take singing lessons.

He eventually went to England for three years acting with the famed Bristol Old Vic whose company included Eric Porter, Peter O'Toole, Richard Harris, Rachel Roberts and Moira Shearer.

He followed with a year at London Old Vic and also danced with the Western Theatre Ballet Company. Michael Langham entered his life then and remains his favorite director. It was through Langham that Behrens became a member of the Canadian Stratford.

Tours with the Canadian Players and marriage to actress Deborah Cass were natural extensions of this period. "I felt the need of new experiences and moved on to spend five years at the Guthrie Theatre in Minneapolis," says Behrens. "It was there that I did one of my best things — Estrogen in Waiting for Godot."

He has now lived in Hollywood for five years.

"You fall into the Hollywood trap," he says about offers from theatre companies. "You're afraid to leave town for fear they'll forget you."

Behrens says what other actors say is true — cuts in film editing often eliminate as much as two-thirds of your scene. It's happened to him more than once.

But unexpected bonuses also occur.

Behrens got a call from his agent late one Friday afternoon: "Do you have a tuxedo?" "Yes, of course."

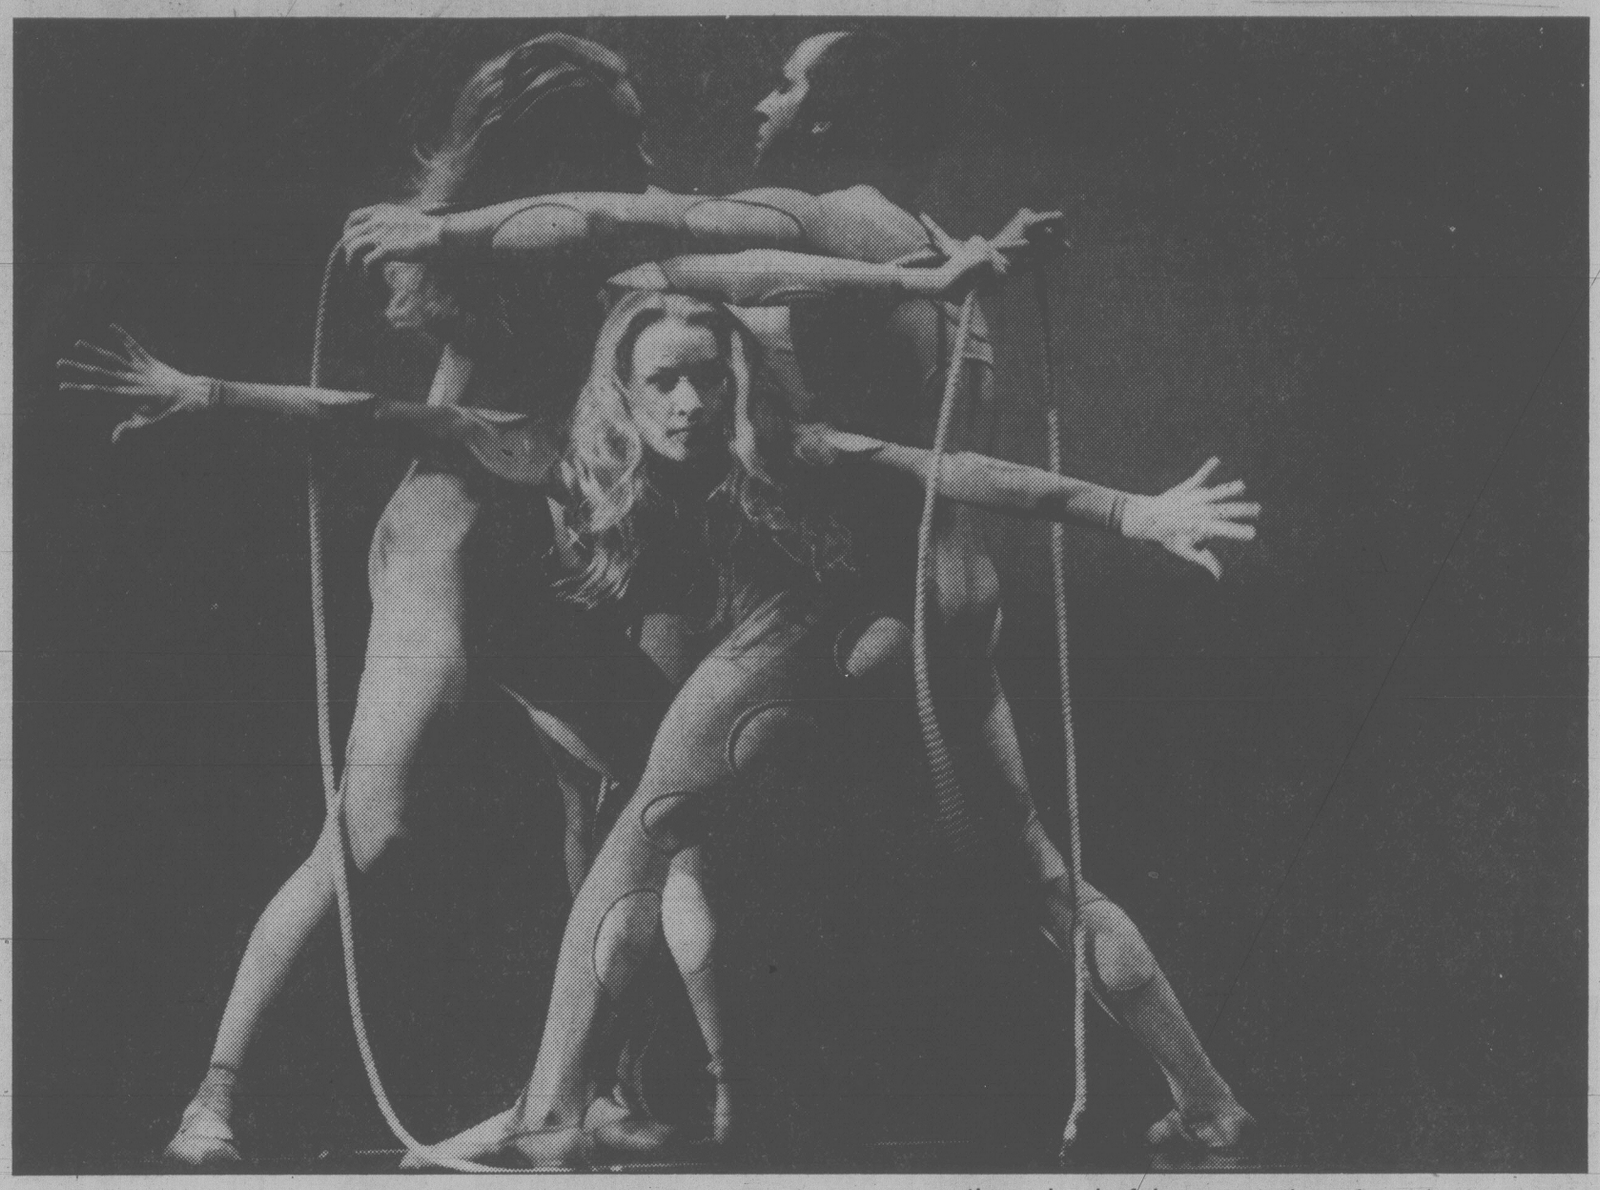

He was told to get it on and hustle over to the lot where James Coburn and Susan Sarandon were making the film Loving Couples. "There's nothing much to it — they just want to shoot over your shoulder." Behrens protested: "You don't really want me to do that?" He went along with it anyway.

And he got his reward. The director liked what he saw so much he developed the bit part into three good scenes for Behrens.

"I just hope they'll be there when the film is released," he comments.

At one time Behrens' big ambition was to be in cowboy movies. "Finally I was cast. . .the first day I was eight hours in the saddle. Imagine what it was like trying to get up on the horse the next day — and galloping about, up and down this hilly terrain. . .all that grit and stones being kicked up in your face. I lost my enthusiasm for the cowboy stuff right then."

Behrens has done many films for television both in Canada and the U.S. He did 40 for CBC including some for the NFB. On TV he has appeared in Baretta, Kojac, Columbo, Friendly Fire and two episodes of Steve Allen's Meeting of Minds.

B.C.'s only classical ballet company offers Victoria an energetic and colorful presentation of youth

McPherson Seasoned for kids

stop three for troupe

Third stop in a tour of six Vancouver Island communities by the Pacific Ballet Theatre, will be McPherson Playhouse, Monday at 8 p.m. British Columbia's only classical ballet company, the Vancouver-based ensemble is presenting a three part program featuring the choreography of Fernand Nault and Renald Rabu.

The first work to be presented, Danses Concertantes, is the creation of Nault, resident choreographer with Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, whose credits include the acclaimed ballet version of the rock opera, Tommy.

The ballet is based on music by Igor Stravinsky and features nine members of the company in an energetic and colorful evocation of young people at play.

Rabu choreographed Pierrot 1980, which features 10 members of the company performing several incidents in the life of Europe's traditional clown figure. The music is by Vivaldi.

As its final work the company presents Three on a Fifth, also by Rabu. This contrasts classical and jazz styles. Beethoven's fifth symphony, in classical and jazz arrangements, shares time with the Electric Light Orchestra's rendition of the rock standard, Roll Over Beethoven.

Rabu's credits include works for Les Grands Ballets and Montreal's Les Ballets Jazz and the classical Compagnie de Danse Eddie Toussaint.

Artistic director of the company is Maria Lewis. A native of Vancouver, she has been a member of the National Ballet of Canada and danced in many Canadian and United States tours. She spent a season with CBC Montreal and three years with Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, performing many leading dramatic and character roles.

In 1969 she returned to Vancouver and opened her own school out of which the professional Pacific Ballet Theatre evolved. She has choreographed a number of works for the company.

Donna Heighes. . . as Cinderella

Among fairy tales probably the most consistent favorite and the one translated into more media than any other, is Cinderella. It has been an immensly popular English pantomime for more than a century, a Russian ballet, an Italian opera and an American musical as well as a Walt Disney film.

For its first children's production of 1980, Four Seasons Musical Theatre Society will be presenting a musical version of Cinderella for nine performances, opening at McPherson Playhouse Saturday at 2 p.m. It will also play at the McPherson Feb.2, 9, 16 and 23. March 1 it will be seen at the Cowichan Community Centre in Duncan; March 8 at Cedar Hill Recreation Centre; March 9, Esquimalt Recreation Centre and March 15 at Parkland School at Sidney.

The cast is headed by Donna Heighes as Cinderella. Audiences may remember Donna's portrayal of Mary Magdalene in last year's Victoria Operatic Society hit, Jesus Christ Superstar.

Others in the cast are Don House and Steve Moysey as the stepsisters; Vonne Sherman as the cruel stepmother; Diane Gendron as an absent-minded fairy godmother, and Ron Vissers as the prince, with choreography by Gini Lefever.

Sloth, pride, wrath, gluttony, lust, avarice and envy, are the seven sinful subjects of Quebec singer Pauline Julien's latest album. Entitled Les Sept Peches Capitaux, the album is the first French-language version ever recorded of The Seven Deadly Sins, the operatic ballet by Kurt Weill and Bertold Brecht which had its premier in Paris in 1933. Recorded in Montreal, the album will be marketed on the Kebec-Disc label in Canada and the RCA label in France.

Like any other author, Fania Fenelon was delighted to negotiate a film version of her work — until CBS-TV cast Vanessa Redgrave in the leading role. Now Fenelon — a survivor of the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz — wants the film, Playing for Time, boycotted on grounds the pro-Palestinian Redgrave is "a fanatic .., who is against Israel." She's asking CBS affiliates to refuse to air the film. If that fails, she'll campaign viewers to "switch it off."

Leaping Lizards! There's another Annie on Broadway — the fourth since the hit musical by the same name opened in April, 1977. Allison Smith, 10, takes over on Jan. 29 for Sarah Jessica Parker, 14, who has outgrown the part. Allison was selected from more than 500 applicants.

Fenelon . . . a Redgrave concern

In the Bo Derek movie 10, the number stood for the top of the scale in feminine pulchritude. Now, climbing on the bandwagon, the Frontier Hotel in Las Vegas is running a contest for No. 11. Maybe Micki Cole misunderstood. Her letter read: Dear Ser: I would like to inter your looking for number 11 contest. In closed you will find my picture. My vitels are 4 feet 6 inches, 25-22-26." And she added a post script: "If you think this is good, just wait for 5 years and I will be 15 years old." Next birthday, she will indeed be "11" — with or without the contest.

Lee Majors is lonely, miserable — and bitter. But he says he still wants his wife back — that, "Farrah has a lot of class and I don't think I will ever find anyone to compare her with. She's one of a kind and I love her. It's that simple." He does not, however, want "ex-friend" Ryan O'Neal, back — says he hasn't spoken to him since he decamped with Farrah. Majors' bitterness shows through. Says he, "I used to be the only one who could shower with Farrah. Now anyone can — if they buy her shampoo."

Elvis' stepmother Dee Pressley is in New York autographing Elvis, We Love You Tender.

A fiend in need Sellers' new role

By RODERICK MANN

HOLLYWOOD — When a director finishes shooting a movie, filming comes to a stop. At least that's the general idea.

So it is interesting to speculate about what is going on in Paris where Peter Sellers is starring in The Fiendish Plot of Dr. Fu Manchu for Orion.

Piers Haggard, the film's director, left last week and returned to his London home. Principal photography, it was announced, was over.

But — surprise, surprise — filming is still going on, with the redoubtable Sellers himself now at the helm.

And in Paris there is a great deal of to-ing and fro-ing by the Orion brass, none of them looking particularly happy.

Just what is going on?

According to sources in Paris, Sellers — who suffered a mild heart attack some weeks ago which necessitated hospitalization in Geneva — returned from his Swiss home last week and was not at all pleased at the footage he saw pieced together.

So much so that he determined to shoot additional sequences himself and advised Orion of this.

Not surprisingly, in London Piers Haggard is making no secret of his disenchantment over this curious turn of events.

Now this $12 million movie — in which Sellers plays dual roles — will continue on for at least three weeks, I understand.

It's hard to believe, I know, but when Warren Beatty telephoned that stunning looking Italian actress Ornella Muti it wasn't to ask her for a date — it was to talk to her about a film.

Now this has definitely got to be a first. Indeed, it might even find its way into the Guinness Book of World Records.

"I was making Flash Gordon in London," says Ornella, "when Warren telephoned me at home. I didn't believe it was him at first; I thought it was a friend of mine playing a joke. So I just laughed. But it was really him. He was calling to tell me that his friend James Toback was coming to London and he'd like me to meet him. He thought I'd be just right for the film he was going to make, Love and Money."

James Toback did come to London. And she did meet him. And apparently she was just right for the role, because she got it.

But she still hasn't met Warren Beatty.

Sultry-looking Ornella, who is just 24, would like to stay on in the U.S. when the movie is finished.

"Once I would never have thought of leaving Italy," she says. "But now I want to. There are just too many problems there. Here at least my daughter Naike can play in safety. Over there I am always worried.

"And here I can wear nice clothes and jewelry if I want to. In Italy you never do that anymore; you do everything not to draw attention to yourself. People are always being robbed, you see.

Little Justin Henry, the 8-year-old responsible for so many soaked handkerchiefs among audiences watching that marvelous movie Kramer vs. Kramer, is going to meet the Queen of England when that picture gets a royal send-off in London on March 17.

Despite this, it seems he has no real interest in continuing acting, even if he has been called "an absolute natural" by the film's director, Robert Benton.

From Eskimo to Inuit

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The first exhibition of Inuit art ever held took place in 1949. The work of these artists today continues in the familiar modes of previous decades, but practical considerations, technical expertise and a growing artistic consciousness have all brought about important artistic developments.

These are mirrored in the exhibition, Inuit Art in the 1970s, which opens Wednesday at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

What was known as Eskimo art in the 1950s — Inuit is now the preferred term — was a product of a way of life that was rapidly being assimilated by Western culture. In the 60s and 70s the process developed further, but Inuit traditions and artistic values have remained strong despite predictions to the contrary.

Some emerging aspects of Inuit sculpture and printmaking are an increased consciousness in the artists of their own artistic validity, references to contemporary life in the works, and a less intuitive approach. The strong spiritual resources of the Inuit are, however, evident throughout.

Inuit art has become a firm tradition among the people and is not a transitory phenomenon created by outside merchandizers. The current exhibition, organized by the Agnes Etherinton Art Centre, Kingston, is accompanied by a comprehensive catalogue.

Also opening on Wednesday, is a delightful showing of Kogo — Japanese incense boxes. The collector in this case was the French statesman Georges Clemenceau. After his death the collection was purchased by a Quebec industrialist who eventually donated it to the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

The crates containing the works were mislabelled and languished in the museum basement until a curious scholar pried them open late in 1976.

The rediscovery of the amazing collection resulted in the current exhibition of 566 kogo in porcelain, stoneware and raku from more than 100 Japanese kilns. Kogo are palm-sized or slightly larger and often take the form of folk art studies of birds, fish, animals, gods, flowers, vegetables. They also appear in geometric abstract forms and in a great range of color and design. Despite their small size kogo possess obvious humor and charm.

A third new exhibition represents recent landscape drawings by Victoria-born Ann Kipling. Her intimate calligraphic style is highly individual, compelling and visionary in concept.

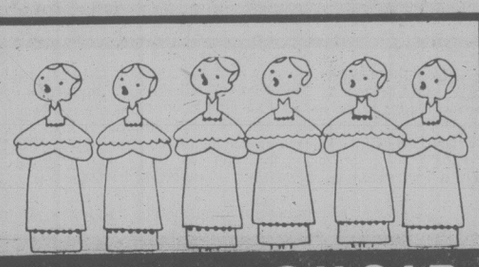

All three new shows will remain on view through March 16.

China film arrives

Just received at the Victoria office of the National Film Board is North China Commune, an 80-minute film in rich color, dealing with daily life in a rural Chinese commune near Peking. The film touches on the political and social organization of this unique institution.

There will be six free public showings given at the NFB office, 811 Wharf. Seating will be limited to 40 per showing and admission will be by phone reservation only.

Showings will begin at 9 a.m., 12 noon and 3 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Those wishing to make reservations should call 388-3868 and indicate a preferred day and time.

The NFB office also has films on a wide range of topics for free use by the public — which invited to come and browse the shelves during open hours.

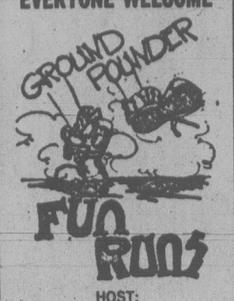

A concert of baroque music performed on original instruments will be presented by the University of Victoria School of Music, Friday in the recital hall of the Music Building.

Participating will be Erich Schwandt, harpsichord; Jesse Read, baroque bassoon; Elissa Poole, baroque flute, and Margot Andison, soprano. They will be performing works by Bach, Galliard, La Barre, Monteclair, Carissimi and Zachow.

The concert will benefit a fund for the School of Music's early instrument collection which includes historic wind instruments as well as modern copies.

Admission to the concert is $3 for adults; $2 for students and senior citizens.

Valdy joins the Circus

Dance company and folksinger collaborate for presentation next Saturday

Folksinger Valdy will appear in concert with Spectrum Dance Circus at the University Theatre Auditorium Jan. 26.

The well-known musician has written five new compositions for this performance and along with four other musicians will be playing throughout Spectrum's performance.

Spectrum is a Victoria-based dance company run by Montrealer Constantine Darling. Originally trained at the New York City Ballet school, he worked with Eva von Gencsy in Montreal at the founding of Les Ballets Jazz and in the early 1970's operated a company of his own in that city called Shango.

Darling and his family moved to Victoria in 1978, but he had no plans to dance at that time and expected to become a carpenter. He started teaching at the Y and pretty soon the course had expanded into a summer school and then the Spectrum Dance Circus, which has been operating about 1½ years.

The company has had sell-out performances at McPherson Playhouse, the University of Victoria and around Vancouver Island.

Another year and another grant could make the eight-member company solid enough to put down permanent roots. Right now the comany's efforts are voluntary and dancers must find other jobs to make enough money to live on.

One member triples as choreographer, manager and balletmaster, while Sheila Mackinnon, a native of Victoria who left 20 years ago to become a star of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, recently returned to teach at the Wynne Shaw studio and is helping out as ballet mistress and guest choreographer.

Darling believes that modern ballet has a place in Victoria along with classical ballet, but has modified his approach somewhat since the early days to include more classical works.

Included in his repertoire are classic ballets like the Mini-Bolshoi and the Ballet of Caracas.

Critics described Spectrum as a promising addition to the Victoria arts scene, full of energy and wit in both choreography and dancing.

Times reviewer Audrey Johnson calls Darling a visionary and described Spectrum's debut at the McPherson as "vital, fascinating and brimming with talent and achievement."

Spectrum attracts some of the finest Canadian talent, including Valdy, who previously performed a duo with dancer Lynda Raino.

Titled Song for Two Rooms, it's an original composition based on a cencert piece originally staged in Montreal. It was inspired by the sound of a trumpet player practising in the apartment above Raino's. The spontaneity of the original dance duet with the unknown horn player is retained in the Valdy-Raino collaboration.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. and tickets are available now at the University Centre box office, McPherson box office, Hatley Park Brandywine, Hillside Mall and Sidney Cards'n Things. All seats are reserved at $7.50 each with a $1 discount to students and seniors.

Newhart enters politics

Bob Newhart and Madeline Kahn are co-starring in a new comedy now being shot in Burbank, Calif. It's called First Family, and it's all about life in the White House. Newhart, of course, plays president to Madeline's first lady, and they have a daughter — Gilda Radner, who's making her film debut. Should she need coaching, she'll need only ask the studio's still photographer. Susan Ford, after [illegible] playing the role for real not long ago.

Prof paints few-warts portrait of friend 'A. Y.'

By COLIN GRAHAM

THE OTHER A. Y. JACKSON, by O. J. Firestone. McClelland and Stewart. $18.95.

A. Y. Jackson was the only unmarried member of that band of Canadian painters who during the 1920s called themselves The Group of Seven. Since the private lives of bachelors are often imagined to be more colorful than those of their domesticated friends, there has been a good deal of curiosity among admirers of Jackson's art as to what he was really like.

In this memoir O. J. Firestone has now told us pretty well what we want to know. Himself an obviously remarkable man (he is a professor of economics at the University of Ottawa and advisor to the federal government who with his wife recently donated to the Ontario Heritage Foundation a gallery of some twelve hundred Canadian works), he knew Jackson during the last two decades of the latter's life. He became first an enthusiastic patron and then a warm friend.

Professor Firestone wisely avoids esthetic analyses and sticks to Jackson as a human being.

The portrait that emerges convincingly explains why this splendid man aroused both the affection and the admiration of literally hundreds of friends.

Tough, earthy, humorous, gregarious and at the same time warmly caring, "A. Y.," as many of his friends called him, was also a man of uncompromising principles with a passionate love of his native land.

He enjoyed robust good health well into his eighties, spurning the ministrations of doctors until he had a serious seizure in 1968 in his 87th year. In his old age, as one of his friends remarked, "He did what a man half his age couldn't do. I had a hard time keeping up with him."

Although he took his art with immense seriousness, he refused to do the same with himself. To a friend he once wrote, "One crazy thing after another is happening to me, you know . . . Life is just kind of a great big joke . . . I don't seem to be able to be miserable."

The author amusingly describes how, at the age of 84, A. Y. at a party displayed his considerable powers as a raconteur until well past 3:00 a.m. when the rest of the guest were becoming glassy eyed with fatigue. Next morning he was up at his usual early hour and exclaiming "How can I feel tired when I've had so much fun?"

Although not what one could call an intellectual, he had a sharp, shrewd mind, read a good deal, and could carry on a pithy conversation in several fields: economics, history, and international relations as well as the arts. He was "a cheerful conversationalist, looking where possible on the positive side and using quick repartee or a humorous remark to make his point."

His generosity to young artists as well-known, as was his disinclination to say anything about his peers that was not supportive.

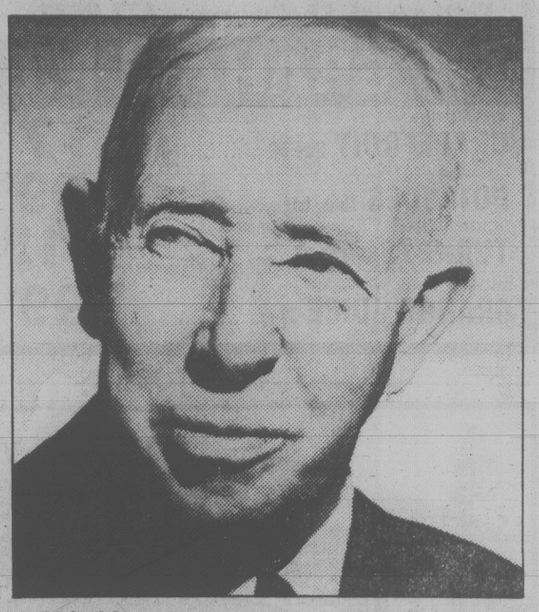

In spite of being rough hewn rather than handsome, Jackson easily attracted and fascinated women. His affairs, some of them platonic and others more lusty, seem to have involved most of the unattached prominent women artists of Quebec and Ontario, figures such as Yvonne Housser, Prudence Heward, Isabel McLaughlin, Sarah Robertson, Frances Loring, and Anne Savage. Among all these it was the beautiful and sensitive Anne Savage who meant most to him, a passion which she fully reciprocated.

It was probably a tragedy for both of them that their love, which almost reached the point of marriage, was never fulfilled. For the sake of Jackson's art, on the other hand, it was undoubtedly a good thing: for much of each year he had to be off on those sketching trips to every cranny in Canada which, besides producing more than 4,000 little oil panels, provided the material from which he created the thousands or so canvases he turned out during his lifetime.

Had he been able to make a decent living from his painting in his early years, he would almost certainly have married. Professor Firestone reveals vividly why matrimony was out of the question for financial reasons until the artist was nearly sixty. From 1920 to 1925 his painting was bringing in only abut $600 a year. And for Jackson the hungry Thirties were literally just that. The only decent meal he was apt to get in a week came when Toronto families invited him to their Sunday dinners.

After the Second World War he became relatively affluent, but by then it was too late. He would never admit to loneliness, yet those closest to him knew that though his friends were legion there was an emptiness when the sociable A. Y. got back to his cluttered lodgings after a party. His painting and his deep relationship to the land had to serve as a substitute for the constant and reassuring intimacies of family life.

Professor Firestone has set forth his tale with candor and modestly, attempting as far as possible to compensate for his friendship's bias by remembering to put a few warts on the portrait. Jackson could be stingy with money, for example, and beneath his outward modesty there lay the kind of vanity he needed to carry him through the early years of adversity and neglect. But the author has been at pains to make it abundantly clear that Jackson was an asset to his country as a man as well as an artist.

JACKSON . . . too poor to marry until nearly 60

Monica Storrs: B.C. pioneer

By LESLIE DREW

GOD'S GALLOPING GIRL: The Peace River Diaries of Monica Storrs, 1929:1931, edited by W. L. Morton. University of B.C. Press. $22.

Many a rural child now grown up will remember the Sunday School van "girls" in their heyday in British Columbia.

These spinsters, usually from England, were a breed all their own, lay missionaries devoted to introducing the Anglican brand of Christianity to the wilds. They would probably have become clergymen if they hadn't had the bad luck to have been born female. Even to many Canadian children of English parentage they were mystifying figures who taught Bible lessons and, during more welcome moments, devised group games, most of them quite alien to backwoods B.C.

Monica Storrs was one of these church workers. Typically, she was a member of an English church family — a daughter of a dean of Rochester cathedral — and she was 41 when she came to the Peace River country in October, 1929. That, of course, was the precise month of the Wall Street crash, which affected her at the time not in the slightest, though she was to see the devastating effects of it all too clearly later on.

The first winter she was alone in the field for her church, the sole missionary in a big chunk of a sprawling diocese whose bishop lived far off on the opposite side of the province, in Prince Rupert. She set up Sunday schools, organized Scouts and Guides, flunkeyed for visiting clergy and student ministers.

But the cheerful Monica Storrs was also a humanitarian. Her rounds on horseback led her to remote homesteads, to farm women who never saw another woman for months on end. Some of them were widows with six or more children, living in a one-room log cabin and trying to scratch a living in country that made other parts of interior B.C. look like lotus-lands. Monica Storrs cheered these lonely women, got help for sick people, arranged social gatherings. She was an unofficial social worker before the day of the social worker as such, on a frontier just opening to mass settlement. In 30-below-zero weather, deep mud, or searing heat, she kept going uncomplainingly.

She grew to love the Peace, and she stayed to build a home for herself and companion workers, and to serve her church there until 1950.

The diaries she wrote from 1929 to 1931 were really day-to-day accounts of her work sent back to England to justify — and encourage — the financial backing she received from church worthies, and because of this she wrote much more explicitly than most diarists. Her observations were keen and sympathic.

"Is it grisly bear or Eskimo," Storrs wrote on photo: "or only apostolic Mo/With shrinking form and face of woe/Alone amid the parky snow/at 25 or more below?"*

As the Depression deepened, cash became almost non-existent for many families, and the barter system took over — farm produce for groceries. But by 1931 she was to report that "even that process is rather at a standstill now because everyone has too much of the same thing and the stores are refusing to be paid in unlimited eggs instead of dollars. One poor man took fourteen dozen eggs and tried to exchange them for groceries but the storekeeper would not give him a pinch of salt for the lot, so he had to take them home again. There's heaps of milk and cream now too (late spring), and people would love to export it if only to Pouce Coupe, but the cost of getting it out sixty miles would be far more than it's worth, so that's no good either. I long for them to make cheese with it, if only for home consumption. But nobody seems to know how to and alas! I don't either."

The hardships of the settlers — Scandinavians, Russians, Americans, Britons, migrants from the prairie provinces, yes, and native Indians — seem incredible today. By their comparative wealth in equipment, most of the back-to-the-bush crowd of today look like dudes.

In other words, these diaries are history, which is why they have been published. The title, God's Galloping Girl, isn't likely to appeal to readers. (Who chooses such a clunker for 1980s readers, even it was the jocular term applied to Monica Storrs? Surely not W. L. Morton, whose editing is excellent.) But the content is what counts, and this book so accurately describes the Peace and the lives of its people during the 1930s that readers who haven't already visited the area will want to do so, if only to see how much it has changed.

This is the third in a series of editions of personal writings on B.C. history, following on The Reminiscences of Doctor John Sebastian Helmcken, and the recollections of Susan Allison, published under the title A Pioneer Gentlewoman in British Columbia.

PEACE RIVER, 1930: Settlers' hardships "seem incredible today"

SF role as 'literature of ideas' looks to be having comeback

By JULIAN REID

THE JESUS INCIDENT, by Frank Herbert and Bill Ransom. Longman. $14.95.
MACROLIFE, by George Zebrowski. Fitzhenry & Whiteside. $17.25.
STARDANCE, by Spider and Jeanne Robinson. Fitzhenry & Whiteside. $11.95.

Many years ago, someone termed science fiction "a literature of ideas" — and, with good reason, the label stuck.

Today, this sub-genre of philosophical SF is still very much with us; indeed, it seems to be undergoing somewhat of a resurgence. As witness the three volumes at hand, each of which demands to be read and evaluated as much on the strength of the abstract ideas it embodies as it does on its merits as a story plain and simple.

The Jesus Incident, by Frank Herbert and Bill Ransom, addresses itself, as its title implies, to specifically theological issues. And unlike co-author Herbert's best-selling Dune, a novel of ideas which was also a rousingly good story on the side, it offers formidable hard sledding to anyone naive enough to pick it up hoping for nothing more sophisticated than an old-fashioned "good read."

Indeed, The Jesus Incident is cut fron the some cloth as Herbert's previous novel, The Dosadi Experiment, or his earlier Destination: Void, to which it is a sequel of sorts. Anyone who found these earlier efforts hard to stomach should most emphatically steer clear of this one!

As the narrative is wooden and virtually impossible to follow at times, the nine main characters merely soulless ciphers, and the settings almost totally lacking in sensual veracity and verisimilitude, the book fails resounding as fiction. As a 400-page mystical parable, a hard-nosed meditation on the relationships between Man and God, Good and Evil, it fairs slightly better, however.

Metaphysical

Fortunately, George Zebrowski's Macrolife is rather more successful, both as fiction and as sociological and metaphysical speculation — partly because its concepts are clearer and more widely appealing, and partly because as a story it at least has the merit of intermittently holding the reader's interest. But, once again, it is on the strength of its ideas that this novel must stand or fall.

Zebrowski's book is a three-stage Cook's tour through the future evolution of humanity, built around the late Dandridge Cole's challenging concept of "macrolife," a new life form of gigantic size which has for its cells individual human beings, plants, animals and machines — in other words, entire societies and ecosystems apotheosized into immortal super-organisms, and functioning as such on a transcendently "hyper-personal" level.

The first section, set in the year 2021, is notably mainly for its conceptual content, which largely overshadows the rather contrived plotting. Part II, set a thousand years later, is also overweighted with ideas, but remains moderately interesting as a story in its own right. The concluding section, set some 100,000,000,000 years hence at the far end of time, offers a flawed but nevertheless breathtaking climactic vision, sufficiently impressive to vindicate the book as a whole.

All in all, whatever its shortcomings as fiction, Macrolife is well worth reading as an essay in speculative ideas.

By contrast, Spider and Jeanne Robinson's Stardance has a great deal to offer on both the fictional and philosophical fronts. In particular, the award-winning title novella that serves as the novel's first section is a very effective piece of SF indeed — the genuinely moving semi-tragedy of Shara Drummond, creator of what will undoubtedly some day become a very real new art-form, the zero-gravity dance.

Felt out

Despite some slapdash writing, this story really works, because unlike The Jesus Incident and Macrolife it has been felt out as well as thought out — and because co-author Jeanne Robinson is herself a dancer, so that the entire book is suffused throughout with a commendable sense of authenticity.

The remaining two-thirds of the novel, built around Stardancers, Inc., a space-going choreographical commune founded by Charlie Armstead, an embittered ex-dancer who narrated Shara's story, is rather more abstract and philosophical, culminating in a visionary climax similar to that of Macrolife. In general, this continuation is rather less satisfactory than the original novella, but it is well worth reading for all that.

Melissy Dalciny Caldony Yankee Pankee, etc., etc.

By LOUIS GROSSBERGER

John Train was once at Harvard studying comp lit. Reading a copy of Collier's one day, he came across a man called Mr. Katz Meow.

This was in a column about real people with odd names. The column went on to give the following example of odd given names for women: Chlorine, Dewdrop, Dinette, Faucette, Larceny, Mecca, Twitty and Zippa. A methodical man, Train took out one of the little black notebooks he always carries and wrote them all down.

Later, Train met one of Harvard's most distinguished figures, professor of humanities Howard Mumford Jones. He told Jones about Mr. Katz Meow. Jones replied that he had once known a Miss Magnetic Love. Train wrote it down in his notebook.

Bemused by this occurrence (as he puts it), Train went off to lunch with a man named Gregg and recited the entire tale. Gregg produced a postcard from an uncle in South Carolina, who wrote that his landlady was named Melissy Dalciny Caldony Yankee Pankee Devil-Take-The-Irishman Garrison. This made Train slightly dizzy but he managed to get the notebook out and record it.

All that happened on the same day.

The following United Press International stories are among the little gems recorded in John Train's book True Remarkable Occurrences:

□ "PRAGUE — Vera Czermak jumped out of her third-story window when she learned her husband had betrayed her.
"Mrs. Czermak is recovering in hospital after landing on her husband, who was killed, the newspaper Vecerni Pravha reported today."

□ "TAIPEI — A young Taiwanese man has written 700 love letters to his girl friend over the past two years trying to get her to marry him.
"His persistence finally brought results.
"A newspaper reported yesterday that the girl has become engaged to the postman who faithfully delivered all the letters."

The offices of Trainer, Smith Counsel, the investment firm of which John Train is president, are on the 41st floor of a building on Park Avenue in New York.

He has in his office now what looks like an abstract wooden sculpture. In fact, he says, it is the forcolo of a gondola. That is, the oarlock. He also has a framed photo showing the mayor of Florence, Italy, thanking President Johnson and other officials for American relief efforts during that city's flood. "Everyone looks cheerful and gay and the reason is that they can't understand a word he's saying," says Train, who is also in the photo.

He was acting as translator. He speaks six languages, or possibly seven. His first wife was Florentine. Their youngest daughter was born during the flood and Train thought of naming her Luvia, which is flood in Italian. He restrained himself and today she is Lisa. Not one of his children has a remarkable name.

Train also has on his office wall some framed currency. The bills are Hungarian and the largest denomination is a trillion-pengo bill. Trillion. "That reminds you how life is," says Train. The bills were printed during the Hungarian hyperinflation of 1946-47, the worst inflation ever. Train once met a man who was there then and who said that he remembered having a trillion-pengo note. He used it to buy two pears.

After years of filling little black notebooks, Train finally just decided the hell with it and got a job printer in Connecticut to print up his annotated list of funny names as a book. He gave them away for Christmas presents. This was 12 or 13 years ago. The work came to the attention of the publisher Clarkson N. Potter, which eventually brought it out under the title, Remarkable Names of Real People." Later came True Remarkable Occurrences and Even More Remarkable Names. The books are quite small and quite funny and Train contemplates more.

Train believes the free-form nutty name is the only indigenous American art form. "That really is true," he says. "These astounding crazy names like Heidi Yum-Yum Gluck or T. Fud Pucker Tucker." He doesn't even mention Immaculate Conception Finkelstein.

Sometimes the names come alive. In Names I, Train gave a few unauthenticated ones and appealed for confirmations. After some months a postcard arrived, stating: "Heidi Yum-Yum Gluck lives." It was from none other. Train listed her in Names II, with this explanatory footnote: "Mr. Gluck pere, infatuated by Gilbert and Sullivan, named his son Nanka, after Nanki-Poo, another character from The Mikado." It turned out that Heidi Yum-Yum Gluck is an artist from Brooklyn who was in fact giving a show on 75th Street, only two blocks from where Train lives.

Train writes a regular column on investing for Forbes magazine. And his father, Arthur, wrote hundreds of Saturday Evening Post stories about a shrewd old Yankee lawyer named Ephraim Tutt. John Train amuses himself climbing Alps and sailing off Maine. He smiles occasionally.

Without any further excuse, here are eight more remarkable Train names: Positive Wassermann Johnson, T. Hee, Zoda Viola Klontz Gazola, Zilpher Spittle, Zowie Bowie, Oofty Goofty Bowman, Magdalena Babblejack and Herman Sherman Berman.

The obscene ones in the book are even better.

VSO offers Brahms' finest

The Victoria Symphony's own, concertmaster Derry Deane and principal cellist Larry Skaggs, will be starred with conductor Paul Freeman in the Sunday-Monday pair of Victoria Symphony concerts.

The two soloists will join in performing the Brahms Double Concerto in A minor for Violin, Cello and Orchestra. Considered one of Brahms' finest works, performances of it are nevertheless comparatively rare because of the problem of bringing together two artists of matching high calibre.

Deane has toured in Europe many times, has recorded on the radio of several countries, including the Netherlands and Norway, and has appeared on educational television in Singapore.

A world tour included Far and Middle East countries as well as Czechoslovakia , Holland and Norway. She has been artist-in-residence at several universities and participated in major music festivals including Tanglewood and Aspen.

Skaggs spent six years with the Sacramento Symphony Orchestra and was principal cellist with the Berkeley Promenade Orchesta, the Aspen Philharmonic and at the 1972 Congress of Strings. He has also won a number of competitions in the United States.

He has been heard frequently in Victoria as a soloist and a member of chamber groups. Currently he and Derry Deane are presenting with pianist Kathleen Solose, a series of noon concerts at McPherson Playhouse comprising the complete piano trios, violin sonatas and cello sonatas of Beethoven.

Freeman, who has been guest conducting in several cities, fulfilling commitments made prior to his appointment to the Victoria Symphony podium, will spend the next several months mainly in what he and his family now regard as home.

He will be conducting five of the remaining six pairs of regular concerts, a couple of special concerts at the University Centre auditorium, and the Pacific Opera's semi-professional production of La Boheme.

For the balance of this weekend's pair of programs, Freeman has chosen Murray Adaskin's Suite for Orchestra and the Tchaikovksy Symphony No.2 in C minor, nicknamed the "Little Russian" because of its pronounced use of Ukrainian folk melodies.

Both concerts take place at the Royal Theatre, Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and Monday at 8 p.m.

Debut set

NEW YORK (NYT) — Aleksandr Godunov, the Bolshoi Ballet star who defected to the West last August, will dance with the American Ballet Theatre after all, making his with in Chicago starting Feb. 11.

He had been touring with the Bolshoi in this country when he was granted political asylum, was to have made his debut Dec. 2 at Kennedy Centre in Washington, but the week before, he withdrew.

CITY OF VICTORIA

ADVISORY PLANNING COMMISSION

TUESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1980 — 7:30 P.M.

A meeting of the Advisory Planning Commission will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, January 22, in Committee room No. 1 at City Hall. The following rezoning applications are included on the Agenda.

The meeting will be open to the public and any person, having an interest in land within a radius of one block of the site of the proposed rezoning, may make representation to the Advisory Planning Commission at the meeting.

727 & 745 FRONT STREET — M.B. ROBERTS (APC #1919)

Rezoning of two vacant lots between 727 and 745 Front Street and abutting also onto Russel Street from "R-1B Single Family Dwelling District" to "R-2 Two Family Dwelling District" to permit construction of one duplex.

821 BURDETT STREET — THOMAS HARTSHORNE CORPORATION LTD. (APC #1924)

Rezoning of a vacant site at 821 Burdett Street (between 809 & 837 Burdett) from CHP-R-3 (which permits construction of an apartment building) to "CHP-OB Cathedral Hill Precinct Office Building District" to permit construction of a 5-story office building with a total floor area of 35,700 sq. ft. with 38 parking spaces.

1605/1623 HILLSIDE AVENUE & 3080/3033 SCOTT STREET — DANCLAIR DEVELOPMENTS LTD. & ESTATE OF HUGH CARBERY (APC #1921)

Rezoning of 1605 & 1623 Hillside Avenue, 3080 & 3033 Scott Street and northerly 200 ft. of Scott Street from "C-1s Limited Commercial Service Station District," "C-1 Limited Commercial District," and "R-1B Single Family Dwelling District" to "C-1N Neighbourhood Shopping District" to permit construction of a two storey office and shopping complex with 52 parking spaces.
It is proposed to close the northerly 200 ft. of Scott Street and consolidate the road allowance with abutting properties.

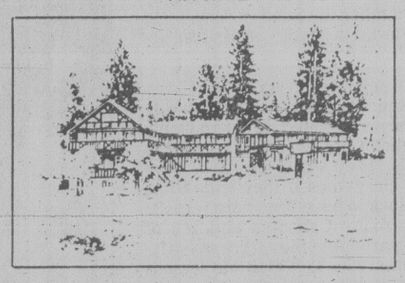

Further inquiries should be directed to the Department of Community Development (Tel: 385-5711, Local 360) between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Hint of Cotswolds deep in Monterey

ON the GO with JERRY HULSE

MONTEREY, Calif. — Pss-st, don't pass it around, but I've discovered a new inn.

First off, it's the only inn in Monterey, a private, old half-timbered Tudor place (circa 1929) with a special homeyness that brings to mind one of those British bed-and-breakfast affairs hidden away in some deep cleavage of the Cotswolds.

The Old Monterey Inn is only a few minutes by foot from Fisherman's Wharf, but the property seems a continent away.

The result is precious peace dead centre of a gorgeous garden, all of which is fine with guests, most of whom came looking for quiet in the first place.

The only sound one hears is the chirping of a blue jay. Or perhaps a sparrow nesting in an ancient redwood surrounded by roses, hydrangeas, geraniums and rhododendrons.

At the Old Monterey Inn one has the choice of seven bedrooms; with or without bath. Rates: $50-$65 a day double. If it's without, the visitor shares an in-between bath with the occupants of an adjoining room.

Guests snooze beneath goose-down comforters and are spoiled by proprietors Ann and Gene Swett; those who don't show up by 9:30 a.m. are served breakfast in bed.

In the case of romantics, they can slip away to secluded tables in the garden.

No ordinary continental breakfast is this. It consists of banana slices floating in orange juice, assorted fruits and homemade muffins, pumpkin bread and Danish pastries.

Part of the deal at Old Monterey Inn is a sherry-and-crackers party hosted by the proprietors at five o'clock each afternoon.

Gene and Ann Swett bought their old mansion 10 years ago as a private home for themselves and their six children. After the kids flew the nest, the Swetts got the idea of converting the residence to an inn.

Touring the state, they picked up impressions at a string of guest houses.

The finished product is among the niftiest of the lot. In one room a swinging bed hangs from the ceiling by chains. Books line the walls of another and there's a fireplace plus a sundeck and a king-size bed.

'Stepping through door like looking into 19th century'

Previously the attic was used as a game room. Now the pool table has been moved downstairs to the living room. Besides snooker, guests play cards and backgammon and piece together jigsaw puzzles.

Soft drinks and juices (they're free) are stored in a refrigerator on the second floor and coins for calls are placed in a dish by the telephone. For the guest who may have forgotten something, bathroom cabinets are stocked with toothpaste, shaving cream and other toilet articles.

Each guest gets a key to the front door. That way the Swetts don't have to wait up for the night owls.

When fog rolls in, a blaze crackles in the living-room fireplace—and on sunny days, guest swing from hammocks stretched from a forest of trees.

Meanwhile, next door in Carmel, the venerable Pine Inn on Ocean Avenue, continues to do a lively business. Its 49 rooms (no two alike) are comfortably ensconced in a Victorian mood of brass and old lace. (It's been one of our long-time favorites).

Stepping through the front door of the Pine Inn is like taking a look back into the 19th century. A grandfather clock ticks away the hours beside a lighted fireplace; red carpets flow across the floors and Victorian chandeliers cast their light.

It will cost you between $29 and $69 to spend the night in one of the inn's old brass beds.

Just off the lobby, drinks are poured in the Red Parlor with its stained-glass windows and kerosene lamps. Steps away meals are served in the Gazebo, whose domed roof is rolled back on moonlit nights.

Brunch at the Pine Inn is a Sunday tradition; the buffet table sags with apple rings, peaches, pears, croissants, French rolls, stuffed eggs, seafood au gratin, creamed turkey and chicken livers sauteed in wine sauce.

Spread throughout the inn are fresh flowers, marble-topped tables and old prints.

TWA pilot Marshall Hydorn and his wife, Diane, operate Carmel's Sea View Inn, a delightful three-story shingled affair on Camino Real.

Dating from 1906, Sea View has a good deal going for it. For one thing, it's homey, rockers are spread among the rooms and thick comforters cover the beds.

A brick fireplace glows in the living room, fresh flowers brighten guest quarters and classical music (as well as light jazz) is piped to the parlor.

Manager Yvette Carroll prepares a continental breakfast of homemade bread, juice, cereal, turnovers and fruit.

Sea View got its name before a forest of trees cut off the sight of the ocean a couple of blocks away. Still, it provides a touch of Maine-Massachusetts flavor. The nine guest rooms are pegged at $22 to $30 a night, including the continental breakfast.

Another sort of sanctuary, Vagabond House. One guidester called it the "Tiffany Diamond of country inns."

The description begs correction. Rather than a country inn, it is more a charming but semi-modern motel near the main drag in Carmel.

Cottages surround a shady courtyard with ancient oaks, rhododendrons, camellias, azaleas and roses. Other flowers hang from branches in baskets.

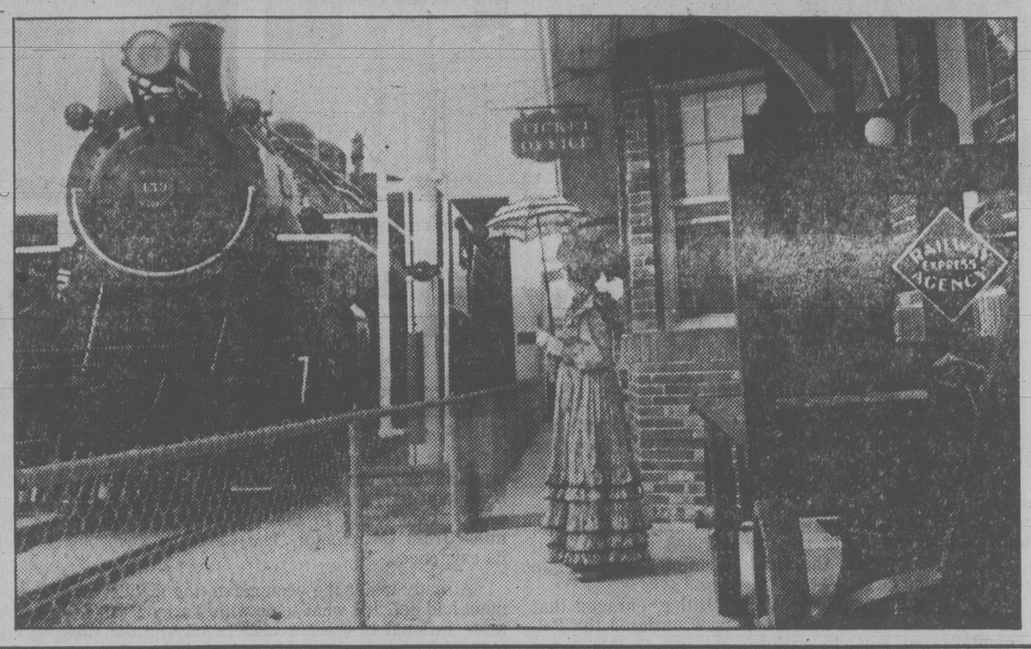

Rooms at the Vagabond are filled with wicker, antique clocks, books and more flowers.

On sunny mornings, breakfast is served in the patio and wine is poured in the afternoon.

So there you are—the secret is out, not just about the Old Monterey Inn but the others, too.

IT'S JUST THE TICKET

It's 1912 at Fort Lauderdale . . . well, not quite, actually it's Flagler Day commemmorating rail pioneer Henry Morrison Flagler. That is just one slice of Florida history being marked this month. Other historical tributes are backed by array of arts and crafts, sports and musical events. Which explains why sunshine state folk go plumb loco when it comes to bragging about what offers in the fruit bowl

Like much of Polish capital, this medieval wall was restored

Sunday morning crowd in Warsaw's popular market square

The gutsy city that wouldn't die

By MARIO ROSSI

WARSAW, POLAND--No one who saw Warsaw's old city at the end of the Second World War ever will forget the eerie, terrifying view of rubble and ruin.

Today, what the Nazis destroyed the Poles have rebuilt.

The first day of the war—Sept. 1, 1939—marked for Poland the beginning of five terror-filled years of Nazi occupation. At dawn, the first German bombs began raining over the city.

In the summer of 1944, Adolph Hitler, enraged that an insurrection had erupted in Warsaw, ordered the Polish capital razed. When liberation came, Jan. 17, 1945, 70 per cent of housing, industrial establishments and health services, 95 per cent of all movie houses and theatres, and all bridges across the Vistula River had been blown up or set afire.

TODAY THE OLD CITY STANDS exactly as it did before the war, one of the loveliest spots in Europe. Some of the engineers and architects who directed the national effort of reconstruction have explained how it was done.

The wanton bombing in the first days of the war had convinced the city planners that the capital might suffer extensive damage. There also was evidence that German demolition experts had been sent to Warsaw to study the swiftest way to wipe the historical part of Warsaw from the map.

"Warschau—die neue deutsche Stadt," as it later was learned, was a project devised by Nazi urbanists for a German city of 100,000 inhabitants to be erected on the ruins of the Polish capital.

Suspicion turned to certainty when Hitler's intentions concerning Poland became known. Germany would incorporate the industrial regions of Upper Silesia. The rest of the country, being inhabited by an "inferior people," was to lose its national identity and become exclusively agricultural, to feed the Third Reich.

IMPLICIT IN THIS DECISION was the destruction of whatever represented Poland's heritage. Warsaw was to cease being a capital and become a relatively small provincial city.

It was fortunate that thousands of documents, including detailed house plans and photographs of the city, had been kept in the national archives. The material was secretly transferred to the caves of a church some 100 miles from the capital. The Germans never learned of its existence.

Already under the occupation, the clandestine government had debated what to do with Warsaw. Would it not be more rational to erect a modern city on the ruins of the old? The idea was quickly rejected. The Poles were intransigent about rebuilding the national identity the Germans had sought to destroy.

On Feb. 1, 1945, a mere two weeks after liberation, the newly established Polish government decided that the capital's historical quarters were to be re-erected exactly as they once stood.

IT WAS A RASH DECISION, taken as the city lay under a thick cover of snow, and the full extent of the damage remained unknown. Poles from all over the country came to help clear the ruins.

"The wave of enthusiasm that swept over Poland after the liberation made an impossible job possible," said Prof. Stanislaw Lorentz, an architect who directed the work.

"I wonder if at a later time a similar miracle would have been accomplished," he added.

The few outer walls left standing were preserved and original pieces of stone ornament and stucco reused where possible.

The thousands of detailed plans hidden away enabled the architects to redraw a blueprint for each house.

The new blueprints took five years to do. In 1950 the work of reconstruction began, including the building of a tunnel under the old quarters to reroute all traffic. This area was thus preserved for pedestrians only.

THE RECONSTRUCTION OF THE OLD city was completed by 1954.

One more decision remained to be taken: Was the royal castle—left in a heap of rubble by Hitler—to be rebuilt?

In January 1971 the decision was made to rebuild. A civic committee was formed with every shade of opinion represented. Once again the paramount consideration had been the Poles' determination to cling to their history.

"A country like ours that was so often occupied and destroyed understands the necessity of preserving a national identity," an architect stated.

Money poured in from all over the country. Poles abroad, mostly in the United States, have contributed $75,000 so far.

More than 4,000 fragments from the rooms were fished out of the ruins and set aside. All these authentic pieces later were incorporated where they originally had belonged.

NEARLY 100 ARCHITECTS WERE PUT to work. They drew 20,000 blueprints. Each floor, each room, was rebuilt according to the traditional methods; exactly the same material was used as in the original.

The castle now stands as it was when first completed in the 18th century.

Much work still remains to be done on the interior. But some 100 of the 350 rooms are ready and open to the public. It will take another two years to finish the job.

Fortunately, instead of destroying the contents of the castle, the Nazis had removed them to Germany, where they were later found and brought back to Warsaw. The castle stands as a museum for the preservation of some important works of art.

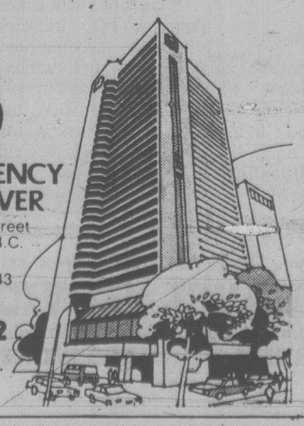

Why the Hyatt Regency Vancouver and the Bayshore Inn have cut winter rates by one-third.

December through March are pleasantly mild winter months in Vancouver. They are also our "slow" months. So, to encourage your visit, we're offering a splendid inducement: one-third off our usual room rates.

With all due respect to the Bayshore, we believe the Hyatt Regency offers even more of an inducement than our friends up the road.

Because their special winter rate gets you a luxurious room with a beautiful view at a fine hotel out near tranquil Stanley Park. But our special winter rate gets you a luxurious room with a beautiful view at a fine hotel right in the heart of exciting downtown Vancouver. So you're steps—not taxi rides—from the city's best shopping, nightlife, restaurants, galleries, theatres and business addresses. And, because our room rates are priced a little lower than the Bayshore's year-round, one-third off ours is less expensive than one-third off theirs. Come discover Vancouver in winter. The only thing "off-season" about us is the price!

Missing the boat and not having MSA Trip Cancellation Protection!

Everything's set for the big vacation . . . tickets all bought and paid for, clothes packed . . . and you're called for jury duty. Or Aunt Marge calls from the hospital to say she's broken her leg and you can't stay at her house after all. Or any of a dozen good reasons to cancel or delay your trip.

MSA Trip Cancellation Protection pays for the non-refundable part of your ticket when your travel plans have to be cancelled; the return fare if you have to come home early, or out-of-pocket expenses if the trip home is delayed, and more.

The point is, when you plan for your vacation, it makes good sense to purchase MSA Trip Cancellation Protection as well.

Along with the Medical and Hospital, Travel Accident and Baggage Protection plans, it's part of the Total Travel Protection Plan offered by MSA.

As more people flock to it, California coast is becoming more crowded

Coastal jewels not so exclusive as life becomes 'affordable'

By MARK STEVENS

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.--Their names alone tell the image, the reality and the pattern.

La Jolla. San Clemente. Laguna Beach. Malibu. Santa Barbara. Carmel. Mendocino.

They are jewels on the California coast—cities that afford splendid views of the ocean and a comfortable seaside lifestyle for those who can affort it.

While there are some communities where the average homeowner lives modestly, the California coast is for the most part a magnet for the wealthy and a nice place to visit for those not as fortunate.

Taking authority from the Coastal Act of 1976 to "protect, encourage and where feasible provide housing opportunities" for low-and moderate-income wage earners, the California Coastal Commission is working to alter the pattern of exclusivity. While just surfacing in many communities, it is an effort that is certain to stir heated debate.

Last summer, the Coastal Commission adopted guidelines that specified what conditions must be met before buildings within the coastal zone can be converted to condominiums. In order to obtain the permit to convert, the developer must make one-third of the units "affordable." That means the price must be within reach of prospective owners who earn from 50 per cent to 120 per cent of the average median income in the state.

To prevent owners from making quick profits, the units will be bought by local housing authorities when the owners move and will be resold at a price corresponding to the percentage increase in median income since the original purchase.

"Over time," coastal planner Steve Horn said, "a unit that is affordable to a family earning 90 per cent of the median income will stay that way.

The Coastal Commission has also considered standards for new housing. It is likely the commission will recommend that 25 per cent of the new housing be made available to low-and moderate-income families. No such standard will be set for new rental construction, however.

The Coastal Commission believes that the policies are economically feasible, thereby meeting the mandate of the Coastal Act, since federal subsidies to developers who build the cheaper units will ensure the developer's profit. In many cases, in fact, such projects are lucrative. No federal subsidies are involved in condominium conversion, however, and developers may squawk over those guidelines.

The main objection is likely to come from those already living in coastal cities who simply want to close the door.

The League of California Cities is expected to work through the state legislature this year to stop the commission from dabbling in housing issues.

Many coastal communities will insist that they are doing their best to protect the fragile coast, that public beaches and parks afford an opportunity for others to visit the coast, that taxpayer money should not be used to subsidize any such effort and that the guidelines require more development and, therefore, more trouble for the delicate coastal environment.

The Coastal Commission disagrees. "We can protect the environment without being elitist," said Don Neuwirth, coastal access program manager at the commission.

To date, the guidelines have produced just 300 units for low-and moderate-income owners, but the commission expects that figure to climb rapidly. Without such guidelines, Horn said, the coast will "continue to degenerate in the direction of more affluent housing."

'Our first Danish exploration . . . . . laced with good humor, charm'

In love with extraordinarily pleasant little land

By NEIL MORGAN

SAEBY, Denmark — It had been a rainy crossing of the Kattegat from Sweden on a big steamer with slot machines, nightclub, and below-decks lines of cars and trucks.

Along with a few hundred others I'd killed time in the queues at an overpriced duty-free shop.

I bought Russian vodka and Swiss bittersweet chocolate that were priced in Swedish kroner. Barely brushing her calculator, the clerk did as I asked: Accepted my Norwegian kroner and gave me change in Danish kroner. Such is Scandinavia. There are moments when a common market seems to work.

The sun came out as we docked at Frederikshavn, at the north tip of the Danish island of Jutland. My wife Judith and I lugged our bags down a caged spiral ramp to the dock, and an amiable Dane agreed to go out of his way to lead me to the car rental office.

A PRETTY GIRL THERE, who spoke four languages as I waited my turn, whisked me into a little red VW and pointed out how I could drive the wrong way along a one-way car ferry approach to retrieve Judith and our bags at the pier.

Elated that all this was working so nicely, we were 10 minutes down the highway before I remembered I didn't know where I was going. A friend in Copenhagen had offered to choose a couple of Danish country inns and book us in. I needed to telephone him. I pulled off at Saeby and found a phone booth.

Beyond a few polite "Vaer sa god's" (Please) and "Tak's" (Thank you), I can't manage any Danish, and the telephone directory offered no clue in English. I dropped in two 25-ore coins and dialled zero. Nothing happened. I tried different coins and dialled zero again, and again.

On the third try my coins returned and a very serious male voice answered. Words for police and emergency seep through in any language. Three zeroes, I deduced, is the crisis number.

BUT THIS OFFICER WAS MY BEST hope, and, for me, not knowing where I am going is a crisis. In slow English I asked how to get a Copenhagen telephone number. Then I eavesdropped futilely during his long conference with two other voices. He came back in careful English: "Little, little, three eight." And hung up.

Inside the phone booth I meditated. The littlest, I reasoned, might be zero. I inserted two more coins and dialled 00-38. An English-speaking operator promptly came on the line and gave me my Copenhagen number.

Old millrace lined channel to Kattegat in village of Saeby on Jutland Island

Back in the car, still laughing, I announced for perhaps the hundredth time in my life that I love the Danes. From that moment our first exploration of the outer Danish islands was laced everywhere with good humor and charm.

Even other Scandinavians give grudging recognition of the Danish capacity for cheerful fun, and their ebullient warmth to strangers. On this summer swing through Scandinavia the Norwegians impressed me with their open pro-Americanism, their tenacity and their durability. With the removal of Prime Minister Olaf Palme, the Swedes seemed anxious to patch up their American relations. Their reputation for being cool and stiff seemed, this visit, a bit overdone.

BUT MANY IN BOTH NATIONS AGREE about the Danes. When three men were shipwrecked on an island, a Norwegian story goes, the Norwegian sailor went off fishing. The Dane collected shells, opened a shop and a restaurant. They returned to the beach to find the Swede, still waiting to be introduced.

I am not a fisherman, and seldom shy or reserved.

If I were to come back in another life as a Scandinavian, it should be as a Dane. Meanwhile, Denmark ranks as an extraordinarily pleasant little land for the visitor, even the relatively rare American who ventures past Copenhagen into the countryside.

Few nations are so dominated by their capital. About five million people live in little Denmark. Although central Copenhagen is declining in population—suburban flight is in progress here, too—one-quarter of the Danes live in or near Copenhagen.

YET DENMARK HAS A 4,500-MILE coastline. The Jutland peninsula, lying between Sweden and Germany, dwarfs the rest. But there are about 500 Danish islands, a hundred of them inhabited. Copenhagen is on the island of Sealand. Odense, the home of Hans Christian Andersen, is on the lovely central island of Funen.

Rural Denmark is immaculate: Square brick farmhouses with inner courtyards, hulking barns set beside rich dairy fields, polite intervals of dark forest. Smaller towns are of stolid brick, and businesslike: There is no loitering in front of shops, no hubbub from pubs.

Jutland, I had imagined, was flat like Holland.

But as we drove south through Aalborg and Rebild, where Danish-Americans celebrate America's July 4th each year, rolling country-side enveloped us. The highest points in Denmark are only 557 feet above sea level, but both are in east Jutland. (Later on the island of Funen we visited the hills called the Funen Alps—the Danes are great jokers.)

TWO SMALL TREASURES CAN BE found on the northeast coast of Jutland: The village of Saeby and Ebeltoft.

After my telephone call at Saeby we followed a millrace down to the waterside restaurant called Siesta, then strolled through the restored town and central shops. Saeby observed its 450th anniversary in 1974. It has yielded to nearby Frederikshavn its once proud harbor commerce, and a highway has bypassed the village. What remains is a commuter town that draws European tourism through its charm and the restorations of old timbered houses.

In the leading bookshop I found much in German, little in English.

"WE HOPE," THE MANAGER SAID in precise and pointed English, "to have a great deal more English in the future."

The other treasure is the even older Village of Ebeltoft (1301), where until recently night watchmen patrolled the streets and called out the hours. Its timbered town hall was first built in 1576. Manor houses in the surrounding countryside testify to former eras of vast landholdings. Today's Danish monarchy is a socialist one.

Bravery award

MERRITT (CP) — For his efforts in trying to save a fellow worker, truck driver Edward Proc of Merritt has received a bravery award from the Workers' Compensation Board. Proc saw John Linney, a fellow B.C. Hydro employee, slump unconscious in his safety belt at the top of a power pole last April. Although unaccustomed to working at heights, Proc climbed the boom of a truck and fastened a hand line to Linney's belt. With the help of other men, he was able to lower Linney to the ground. Linney was dead on arrival at hospital. An inquest showed he had suffered a heart attack.

Moderator here Sunday

The moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, Dr. Kenneth McMillan, will make several appearances—including an ecumenical service—in the Greater Victoria area Sunday.

McMillan will be guest speaker at a men's breakfast at 8:30 a.m. Sunday in St. Andrew's Kirk Hall, 680 Courtney, and will speak at the 11 a.m. service of worship in St. Andrew's before attending a noon reception in the hall.

Victoria Mayor William Tindall will read the scripture lesson at the 11 a.m. service.

In the afternoon, McMillan will attend a congregational supper at Knox Presbyterian Church, Sooke, at 5:30 and at 7:30 p.m. he will be guest preacher at an ecumenical service celebrating Christian unity at Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Sooke.

McMillan, a native of Mt. Forest, Ont., has received a number of honorary divinity degrees in recognition of his services to Canadian churches, and is general secretary of the Canadian Bible Society.

The CBS serves all Christian communions in Canada and his ecumenical contacts range from Pentecostal churches and faith missions to the Roman Orthodox Catholic communions.

McMillan is also active in United Bible Societies, the world body which co-ordinates the work of 65 national bible societies, and is chairman of the general committee of the world body.

McMillan is recognized as one of Canada's outstanding church leaders and as a missionary statesman his influence is felt in a remarkably wide area of the religious life of Canada and in the social concerns of all churches.

Freed from violence

Dr. Hossain Danesh will speak on The Violence-free Society: A Gift for Our Children at 8 p.m. Friday in UVic's MacLaurin Building, Room 144A.

Danesh is an assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of Ottawa and director of the family therapy program, the thanatology service, and post-graduate education in the department of psychiatry, Ottawa Civic Hospital.

Danesh will draw heavily on his experience with the neglected and desperate people whose anger often boils over into violence when he talks to invited civic authorities, educators, community leaders, representatives of the media and the general public.

An equally important reason for Danesh's intense interest in the phenomenon of violence and its prevention lies in his lifelong involvement in the Baha'i Faith, a world religion whose pivotal principle is the oneness of mankind.

Way's vision spreads

Victoria Church of the Way will celebrate its third anniversary Sunday.

Incorporated in January, 1977, with Bill Johns as pastor and Dr. Doug Roberts and Rev. Ted Follows as team ministers, the first service was at the UVic Student Union Building, with 45 people attending. Pastor John's vision was for a non-denominational charismatic fellowship that had as its main thrust outreach to the community.

Christians from Church of the Way now serve and work in prisons, Lifeline House, Upper Room, in the inner healing ministry and with Evangelist Doug Kooy as well as supporting Brian Ruud evangelistic crusades.

Rev. John Francis, Doug Kooy and Brian Ruud joined the team in 1977 and in 1979 Fred Farren, Art Gallaiford and Rick Henson were welcomed as team ministers.

The congregation increased so quickly that the church moved from UVic to the Royal Oak Inn, soon outgrowing that building and moving to the Leonardo Da Vinci Centre.

This past year has seen the birth of three new churches on the Island. Rev. Allan Turner is pastor of the Duncan Church of the Way, Rev. Bill Briggs is at Campbell River Church of the Way and Rev. John Francis is pastoring Church of the Living Word at Parksville.

A special service will be held at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, 20, with Johns and Roberts ministering and music by Kingsfield Choir.

A call for peace in prayer week

When global nuclear disaster is a definite possibility and the world is continually threatened by international terrorism and lawlessness, the theme for the 1980 Week of Prayer for Christian Unity, Your Kingdom Come, sounds a call for prayer and action on behalf of world justice and peace, the two marks of the kingdon of God.

The theme for the 1980 Week of Prayer is taken from the Lord's Prayer, the only example of extended prayer which Jesus left his followers (Matthew 6:10), and was selected by the Graymoor Ecumenical Institute, headquartered in Graymoor, N.Y., and the Commission on Faith and Order of the Council of Churches.

It was developed in cooperation with the Commission on Faith and Order of the World Council of Churches and the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity.

Begun in the United States during 1908 by Father Paul Wattson, SA, the founder of the Atonement Friars, the Week of Prayer is now observed throughout the world by most Christian churches including many in Victoria.

Orthodox groups celebrate Christ's baptism

Holy Theophany Orthodox Church at 3801 Cadboro Bay will celebrate Patron Feast Day today.

Rev. Gleb Jensen will officiate during the Holy Theophany feast day, which commemorates Christ's baptism in the River Jordan.

The event, third in importance to Orthodox Christians after the nativity and Pascha (Easter), is celebrated throughout the world and includes a procession for the blessing of stream, river or ocean waters by the priest.

YOUNGGREN

A LITURGY according to the rites of the Eastern Orthodox Church will be celebrated on Saturday, Jan. 26, in Victoria, followed by the traditional blessing of homes done during the season of Epiphany.

The liturgy, which will be sung in English, will begin at 11 a.m., at 3351 Betula Place in Colwood, and will be celebrated by Father Stephen Slipko, pastor of St. Nicholas Eastern Orthodox Church of Surrey.

The blessing of homes is an annual event in Orthodoxy because Eastern Orthodox Christians believe a home to be a sacred place, and believe the events of daily life to be as important in the life of the Christian as formal church worship.

Information on the service is available by phoning 474-2462 evenings or weekends. Visitors are welcome.

church chronicles

THE SPRING term of the Greater Victoria Lay School of Theology begins at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, at Metropolitan United Church, and at 9:45 a.m. on Wednesday at Christ Church Cathedral Hall. Further information is available at 386-8860 or 383-0128.

THE ANNUAL congregational meeting of James Bay United Church will be held Feb. 11. Various organizations are asked to have their reports into the church, 511 Michigan, by Sunday.

FIRST UNITED Church, Quadra at Balmoral, will hold its annual congregational meeting Feb. 10 following the morning service. A luncheon will be held before the meeting. Everyone in the congegation is encouraged to attend.

PETER YOUNGGREN, a leading Canadian evangelist, will be conducting a crusade at Glad Tidings Church Jan. 27-Feb. 3.

Now in his 20s, Younggren was born and raised in Sweden. For the past six years he has been involved in successful evangelism across Canada and overseas. Capacity crowds have filled auditoriums, churches, tent-cathedrals and sports-arenas.

Younggren believes the gospel is for the whole man. Christ came not only to meet man's spiritual needs, but also his social, physical and emotional needs. There have been numerous miraculous recoveries from many various ailments during crusade services. In spite of the many physical healings, Younggren always emphasises that salvation, to be born again, is the greatest miracle.

Services will be held in the main sanctuary at Glad Tidings Church, North Park and Quadra. Sunday services are at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. with the nightly meetings during the week at 7:30. All are welcome.

WINSTON MAIR will discuss with members of Project North on Monday The Pipeline and Environment in the Yukon. He will use a slide presentation with the discussion.

Mair was chief of Canadian Wildlife Service for many years, then chief of Parks Canada until he moved in 1966 to Manitoba to become deputy minister of mines and resources for six years.

He was a member of the Alaska Highway pipeline panel established in 1976 to study and report on the physical, biological and human environment of the proposed Alaska Highway gas pipeline in the Yukon Territory.

Subsequently this panel conducted similar studies on the Dempster Highway gas pipeline and reviewed means of managing the impacts of both pipelines.

Mair is a consultant on environment land use and Indian socio-economic development, and currently is chairman of the inquiry into the B.C. Section of the Alaska Highway Gas Pipeline.

Friends of Project North who are keenly interested in taking part in the discussion are invited to join the group for this event at 8 p.m. in the Crypt of St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra Street.

Perspectives

By REV. J.A. DAVIDSON

Recently a woman complained to me about her pastor. "He rarely has much to say in his sermons," she said, "but he takes an awful long time to say it."

I have learned the hard way in my more than 30 years of preaching, that it takes me much longer to tell a congregation what I know just a little about than to tell it about something I have wrestled with and have some fairly exact understanding of. On the other hand, a dull sermon may simply seem appreciably longer than an interesting one.

Anyway, concern about the length of sermons has been around probably from the earliest centuries of the Church. When St. Paul preached to the Christians in Troas he "went on and on"—that is the way it is given in the Jerusalem Bible—until a young man, Eutychus, fell asleep and tumbled out a window.

Martin Luther, who himself was inclined to go in for pulpit windbaggery, gave this warning: "Some preachers plague the people with too long sermons; for the facility of listening is a tender thing, and soon becomes weary and satiated." The only biblical guidance I can find on this issue—or semi-biblical, from the book of Ecclesiastius, one of the books of the biblical Apocrypha—is, "Let thy speech be short, comprehending much in few words."

In 16th century England they were pretty blunt about sermon lengths. Many churches had hour-glasses attached to pulpits, and they could be seen by both preachers and worshippers. William Hogarth showed one of these gadgets in a satirical engraving to which he gave the title Sleeping Congregation.

A drawing from the 17th century shows a preacher with an hour-glass in his hand, with the caption beneath giving him these words: "I know you are good fellows, so let's have another glass." Queen Victoria ordered that a glass timer be affixed to the pulpit in her private chapel. It ran to exactly 18 minutes, and apparently she was not amused when a preacher overshot the glass.

A church in Albany, New York, that is more than 300 years old, still has attached to its pulpit a half-hour-glass: In the early years it was turned five times during a sermon.

I was somewhat comforted to read recently that experts in communication theory have discovered that brevity and clarity are often incompatible goals when one is speaking to an audience. We preachers who tend to be longwinded—perhaps most of us—can find a little reassurance in these words from P.T. Forsyth, one of the more influential theologians of the early years of this century: "How can a man preach if he feels through that the people have set a watch on his lips. A Christianity of short sermons is a Christianity of short fibre."

On the other hand there is this warning from Mark Twain: "I once heard a preacher who was powerful good. I decided to give him every cent I had with me. But he kept at it too long. Ten minutes later I decided to keep the bills and just give him my loose change. Another 10 minutes and I was darned if I'd give him anything at all. Then when he finally stopped, and the plate came around, I was so exhausted I extracted $2 out of sheer spite."

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

Elvis' doctor guilty on pill charges

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Elvis Presley's personal physician today was found guilty of overprescribing drugs for the rock star who collapsed and died at his Graceland mansion Aug. 16, 1977.

Dr. George Nichopoulos, Presley's doctor for the last 11 years of his life, was also convicted of overprescribing uppers, downers and painkillers to another entertainer, Jerry Lee Lewis, and eight other patients.

He was found not guilty, however, of malpractice and unethical conduct and of charges that he overprescribed drugs to still 10 other patients.

The five-doctor medical board ordered a three-month suspension of Nichopoulos' licence to practise medicine in Tennessee and placed the white-haired family physician on three years probation.

Nichopoulos, who sat in front of the board as it deliberated his medical fate, was emotionless when the doctors voted unanimously to halt his medical practice.

When asked by the board if he had any comments to make after the verdict was reached, Nichopoulos merely shook his head.

The doctor's wife, who had attended the hearing every day, sat straight-faced. When asked by reporters about her reaction to the verdict, she said, "I don't think the press really cares."

The medical board was unanimous in its votes on all but one of the 20 counts involved in the charge on overprescription of drugs. The doctors voted 3-2 to find Nichopoulos guilty of overprescribing to Robert Deason, one of the doctor's patients who received large amounts of the depressant Quaalude over an extended period of time.

Nichopoulos' prescription of more than 12,000 uppers, downers and painkillers to Presley drew the most comment from the doctors, who considered each charge individually.

"He was under the gun," said Dr. Charles V. Dowling. "He exercised considerable constraint, and there were extenuating circumstances."

The Memphis physician agreed, however, with his colleagues that Nichopoulous was guilty of poor judgment in his handling of records for the drugs given to Presley.

Controversial judge William Douglas dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Douglas, former U.S. Supreme Court justice who championed the right to dissent and exercised it often himself during 36 years on the bench, died today. He was 81.

Douglas retired from the court on Nov. 12, 1975, after serving longer than any other Supreme Court justice in history.

A outdoorsman and hiker, he had been confined to a wheelchair by a stroke which he suffered the preceding Dec. 31.

He said "incessant and demanding pain" made it impossible for him to continue on the bench.

He was in hospital for more than a month after falling at his home in 1976 and re-entered hospital on Christmas Eve with pneumonia.

There was no immediate announcement on the specific cause of death.

Douglas was appointed to the court by President Franklin D. Roosevelt and was sworn in on April 17, 1939, at the age of 40.

Off the bench, he was a controversial figure. His admirers pushed him for the U.S. presidency. His detractors tried to impeach him. He was married four times.

On the bench, he was the court's all-time champion dissenter and a stout foe of any kind of censorship, whether of opinions or of alleged obscenity.

"The human race has been obscene from the beginning," he once said. "To get into this field, I think, is a great mistake."

In 1952, dissenting from a decision upholding a loyalty oath law for teachers, he said such a law "inevitably turns the school system into a spying project."

"The principals become detectives; the students, the parents, the community become informers," he wrote.

Weddings

Ross — Barbour

A lovely candlelight wedding, uniting in marriage Joy Anne Noreen Barbour, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Barbour, 579 Baxter Avenue, and Kenneth Gregory (Greg) Ross, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ross, 4150 Glanford Avenue, took place at 8 p.m. on November 3, 1979 in Metropolitan United Church with Reverend Laura Butler officiating.

Traditional wedding music was beautifully played by Mrs. Ursula Thomas, organist, and Mrs. Ferne McConville on the bell-tower chimes.

Tall standard baskets of pink and white gladiolas and white carnations, and long, white candles in tiered candelabras enhanced the wedding service.

The lovely bride wore a princess style high waisted gown of white jersey satin, the bodice being appliqued with seed pearls and lace inserts. The skirt of her gown fell in dainty pleats and formed into a train. Her white, lace-edged veil, made by her sister, Gay, cascaded from a caplet of seed pearls and lace. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations, centered with gardenias.

The bride entered the church with her father, while the congregation of guests sang the wedding hymn, "O Father All-Creating", and was given away by her father and mother.

During the service and signing of the register, the solos, "I'll Walk Beside You" and "O Perfect Love" were beautifully rendered by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Grace Hanning.

The bride chose as her attendants her sister, Mrs. Gay Barkman as Matron of Honour, and bridesmaids, Ilene Hanning, her cousin, Susan Ross, the groom's sister, and Wendy Cunningham, Kathy Harris, Cindy Souka and Valerie Archibald. The bridal attendants were gowned in alternating rosy pink and burgundy jersey satin gowns, fashioned with large lapels, bodices with tiny pleats and wide self belts. To complete their ensemble they wore matching shoes and carried pastel bouquets of pink and white carnations and yellow daisies. The dainty little flower girl, in a white eyelet gown with burgundy sash was the bride's niece, Jenny Barkman, who carried a small basket of the same flowers as the bridesmaids.

The groom chose his brother, David Ross, who came from Regina, to be his best man, and ushers were Stewart Ludtke, Dennis Roy, Dennis Dyck, Mike Staton, and Rob Barbour, and Lieut. Charles Barkman, brother and brother-in-law of the bride. All were attired in pearl grey jackets, ruffled shirts and grey trousers.

Lieut. Charles Barkman was Master of Ceremonies at the wedding reception which followed at the Princess Room of the Princess Mary Restaurant Vessel. Toast to the bride was delightfully given by Norman Cunningham, a long time family friend and neighbour.

For their toast the bridal couple raised the dual-handled silver loving cup which belonged to the bride's great, great grandfather in Worcester, England.

The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered white wedding cake, decorated with burgundy satin roses. A buffet supper was enjoyed, followed by dancing to Denny's Music.

Out of town guests came from Nanaimo, Vancouver, Coquitlam, Edmonton and Honolulu.

Mutter — McCammon

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCammon announce with pleasure the marriage of their daughter, Mary Ann, to Mr. James Richard Mutter.

The wedding took place in Vancouver on December 29, 1979.

Anniversaries

Bannell — 60th

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Bannell celebrated their Diamond Wedding Anniversary on December 26th, 1979.

Married in London, England in 1919, they came to Victoria in 1961. A reception in their honour, attended by family and a few close friends, was held in the lounge of the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Four generations were present including their first great grandson of eight months. A surprise guest was a niece, Mrs. Pamela Wilson, of Mississauga, Ontario.

Humphrey — 60th

Frank and Dorothy Humphrey, 139-1525 Cedar Hill Cross Road will be celebrating their Diamond Wedding Anniversary, Monday, January 21, 1980. A family dinner is planned for Saturday, January 19th at the Cedar Hill Golf Club, when relatives from Seattle, Quesnel, Fraser Valley, the Mainland and up-Island points will gather.

Among them will be the "Flower Girl", now Mrs. Stamnes of Quesnel, and Arnold Howard, brother of the "Bride", who gave her in marriage.

SOUTH OAK BAY GLORIOUS VIEWS
At the end of a cul-de-sac on a "private lane", a unique, 3-bedroom, 2½-bathroom home that offers superb views of the ocean, mountains and South Oak Bay. The use of wood has been extensive in renovating to combine the "new with the old, and it has been done very cleverly with delightful results. The formal living room with stone fireplace, the separate dining room (both with picture window and view) and the den form the older part of the home. In the extremely attractive "open" kitchen and adjoining family room with Franklin stove, the use of wood is most apparent, and also, on the second floor in the 3 bedrooms which also have additional built-in features and skylights, that make the bright home even brighter. The basement is full with drive-in garage. There is a greenhouse and a "Rockery-garden". A truly charming and original home. Offered EXCLUSIVE. $155,000.

ASPLAND — Peacefully, in England, Sabina Mabel, aged 99 years, wife of the late Robert Aspland.

BOWSHER (nee Allison) — In Victoria, B.C., on January 18, 1980, Hessy Alexandra Smyth Bowsher (nee Allison). Mrs. Bowsher was born in Claudy, County Derry, Northern Ireland, on June 8, 1879, the youngest and last surviving of eight children of the late Dr. and Mrs. William Allison. She was educated in Northern Ireland, attending Victoria College, Belfast, and on the Continent. For a short time she taught English for the Berlitz Schools, in Magdeburg, Germany. She then took up secretarial work in London where she met and, in 1908, married Frederick Harry Bowsher. They emigrated to Canada in that year and took up property in Oyama, B.C., where they operated a fruit farm for some 40 years. After retiring, Mr. and Mrs. Bowsher resided in Calgary for a short time and then took up residence at Buena Vista on Okanagan Lake, where they lived until Mr. Bowsher's death in 1954. Mrs. Bowsher then moved to Calgary where she lived for a few years. She has lived in Victoria, B.C. for some 20 years. Prior to her passing, Mrs. Bowsher was thought to be Oyama's oldest living pioneer of the pre-1910 era. She participated in many pioneer community activities. She was, for several years, secretary-treasurer of Kalamalka Women's Institute, and was a founding member and secretary of the Oyama Boy Scouts Association. She sat on the first jury in Vernon, on which women were members. She was predeceased in 1942 by a son, P.O. Norman Frederick Bowsher (R.C.A.F.), reported missing in action March 31 of that year, and in 1954, by her husband, Frederick Harry Bowsher. Surviving are a son, Allison Patrick, of Calgary, Alberta, and a daughter, Dorothy Marian, of Victoria; two grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren, all of Calgary. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Dorothea Allison, now in her 102nd year, lives in Kelowna.

I would like to express my appreciation for all the kind expressions of sympathy towards me and my family during the passing of my husband, Albert Jelley. Most sincerely, Dorothy Jelley.

309 IN MEMORIAM

GLENN — Robert John who passed away January 19 1975.

He has left us, but is not too far away though we still miss him very much every day. Will always have most fondest memories of a great Dad and Grandad.
—Sadly missed by Daughter Heather, grandaughter, Theresa, and sons John and David.

WELCH - In loving memory of my dear Husband and Father, Harry, who passed away Jan. 19, 1978.
He is not lost-
My own beloved,
Nor has he travelled far
Jusst stepped inside
God's loviest room
Forever loved by his wife May and daughter Shirley and son-in-law Paul Turcotte & granddaughter Cory.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

suncapade

to Fiji

An island dream come true.

A chance to win a dream trip to Fiji

Follow the sun to Eaton's and win a chance on an Island combination trip to Fiji.

Follow these simple rules and a chance on this fabulous trip is yours. Trip for two includes air passage courtesy of CP Air, Island Combination Holiday from Elan Holidays, $300 cash courtesy of Eaton's and travel to and from Vancouver from Victoria plus all travel arrangements by Eaton's Travel.

Just fill out a Suncapade entry form at any cash desk in both Eaton's Buildings. Deposit entry form in barrel located on the Floor of Fashion.

No purchase is necessary. Contest is open to anyone 19 years of age and over (excluding employees and immediate families of Eaton's, Eaton's Travel, Elan Holidays and CP Air). Prize not negotiable. Contest closes Saturday, February 2, at 4:00 p.m.

At the time of this advertisement value of the prize for two is approximately $3,000.

Eaton's will fly you and a friend from Victoria on a 17-day Island Combination Holiday to Fiji and Hawaii.

Your Island Holiday begins when you leave Vancouver by CP Air on your South Pacific flight to Nandi International Airport on Fiji. Here your Elan Holiday guide will be waiting to greet you and transfer you to the beautiful Regent of Fiji. For the first 10 days of your trip you'll be guests of this luxury resort offering a wide variety of activities and entertainment. It's an excellent base from which to sample the delights of Fiji.

After your stay in Fiji you'll be driven back to Nandi to board your CP Air jet flight to Honolulu. On arrival you'll be met by your Elan guide and taken to the new Island Colony Hotel near Waikiki. Here for the remainder of your trip you can avail yourself of the famous sun and services of the Hawaiian Islands. Then on your 17th day CP Air flies you back to Vancouver. Truly a dream trip never to be forgotten.

Elan Holidays

Provides the Island Combination Holiday for two to Fiji and Hawaii.

CP Air

Will jet two to Fiji and return on the Island Combination Holiday.

Drug firm to pay in DES death lawsuit

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Eli Lilly and Co. has agreed to pay $250,000 to the parents of a 17-year-old girl whose fatal cancer was attributed to a drug her mother took during pregnancy in 1952.

The settlement in New York Supreme Court Friday came after the Joseph Levins, of Tonawanda, sued the company following the death of their daughter, Deborah Sue Levin in June, 1970.

The suit against the makers of the drug diethylatilbestrol, commonly known as DES, had been scheduled to go to trial Monday. Justice Samuel Green approved the settlement.

The Levins' attorneys said the drug, which Mrs. Levin took in 1952, had been advertised to prevent miscarriages in unstable pregnancies.

Deborah Sue was born apparently normal and healthy that September, but developed cancer of the vagina in 1968.

The Levins alleged that Eli Lilly marketed DES even though it knew, or should have known, that it had been inadequately tested and that it might have been carcenogenic.

The Levins' lawyers said Eli Lilly is one of 12 companies which marketed DES, a synthetic estrogen.

Four diamond facts to remember

When you are buying a diamond you want the best. We at Eaton's are here to help you find it. In choosing a valuable diamond, there are four main facts to remember.

Fact One is diamond weight. The weight is measured in carats. There are 100 points to a carat.

Fact Two is diamond cut. The more brilliant a diamond is, the more precise the cut.

Fact Three is diamond color. The closer it is to being colorless, the more valuable it is.

Fact Four is diamond clarity. A diamond with very minimal natural imperfections is more precious.

The four diamond facts . . . Eaton's way of helping you choose the best diamond.

Spotlight on texture
SEWING TIPS

Sewing textured fabrics can be a little different from smoother material. For one thing, the weave is often looser. If it's been a while since you last sewed a textured fabric, you may want to bear these points in mind.

- Choose one of the "suggested fabrics" on the back of the pattern envelope to insure that your fabric will adapt to the needs of your pattern.
- Maintain clean edges of your garment by staystitching along curved edges. This prevents fabric fraying.
- Use interfacing when it's called for.
- Use sharp shears for accurate cutting and make sure your fabric lies flat before you cut.
